READINGS and ERIES.

The Pool to be commenced on Wednesday next, Oct. 24, 1888, will be for the rise in Philadelphia and Reading Shares and Erie Shares.

In consequence of information I have received I have thought it wise to return to American Rails, to which I have been so successful hitherto, to find a subject for the next Pool, and after careful consideration I have decided to select the above two stocks.

I cannot do better than commence by placing before my readers the following Extract from the City Article in "Truth" of Oct. 11, 1888, with reference to American Rails generally:

MONEY MARKET.

FRIDAY EVENING.

Discount rates were easy during the greater part of the day at 3¼ per cent., but a firmer tendency was apparent towards the close, when it was rumoured that a large amount of gold had been bought at the Bank of England for Russia. None in reality was taken, although it is understood that arrangements have been made for the despatch to-morrow of about £700,000 to St. Petersburg, consisting almost entirely of amounts purchased on the Continent. The bulk of this total has, it appears, been withdrawn from the Bank of France and the Imperial Bank of Germany, the reduction in the bullion held by these establishments during the week having been nearly £900,000, as evidenced by the returns just published. Apart from heavy exports of wheat hither, the power of Russia to attract bullion has, it is stated, been increased by arrangements for the issue of a new loan for about ten millions sterling. It is questioned whether the English public will subscribe, but extensive applications are expected on the Continent, and part of the amount is apparently being already sent to St. Petersburg by the financial houses interested in the operation. The new factor in connection with recent foreign loans is the desire of borrowers to take a large portion of the proceeds in gold, instead of leaving the almost entire sum here for investment in railway and other materials, as in the the past. According to rumour a further total of about £500,000 in Bank of England notes is also about to be forwarded to Russia, but we are assured, on the best authority, that this statement is unfounded. There is, however, some prospect of fresh remittances of coin to the Argentine Republic, especially if it be true that the modification of the Free Banking Law has yet to be confirmed by Congress. Short loans were in only moderate request, at 2, ¼ per cent. Some of the foreign exchanges were again lower, including the Berlin rate, while the outside charge for the best bills slightly receded in that city.

Under the influence of cheap money the stock markets opened firm, but the rise was subsequently checked by reported adverse bullion movements and consequent fears of dear money at the coming settlement. The final prices, however, showed a partial recovery, although an uncertain tendency was again observable on the Bourses. Consols declined ⅛ per cent., and most of the English railways gave way, partly on the prospect of a great coal strike. Numerous speculative accounts for a rise were closed in this department, the result being a fall in most stocks. But, except Glasgow and South-Western, Brighton "A," and the two Metropolitan lines, which declined ½ to 1 per cent., the relapse did not exceed ⅛ to ⅜. Hull and Barnsley was in request and ⅜ up due to rumours of pending negotiations with the North-Eastern. Amongst American railroads dealings were chiefly centred in Northern Pacific Preference, which were in active demand and rose nearly 1½. Central Pacific were also better, as well as Lake Shore, Norfolk and Western, Denver, Atlantic Firsts, Reading, Erie, Louisville, and Wabash. The last quotations were about the best. Grand Trunks improved with "Americans," notably the Second Preference, and Mexican stocks advanced about 1½ per cent. each in anticipation of a large increase in the traffics during the next few weeks. Owing to the collapse of the Metlac Bridge, goods have doubtless accumulated to an important extent at Vera Cruz. Argentine railways receded, the chief variation (2 per cent.) being in Buenos Ayres and Rosario Ordinary.

Some of the Foreign Government bonds, including Argentine, Buenos Ayres Cedulas, Egyptian Unified, Greek, and Peruvian, were flatter, but Russian exhibited firmness, attributed to purchases in connection with the financial operation already referred to. French Four and a Half per Cents., Hungarian, Portuguese, Spanish, Turkish, and Uruguayan were likewise higher. Cable securities were strong, miscellaneous steady, and gas lower. The principal change in docks was a rise of 2 per cent. in Surrey Commercial. As regards copper mines, a large amount of business took place in Tintos, which, after touching 24⅝, left off at 24½, or ⅜ better than yesterday. Transvaal gold shares were bought, and Salisbury rose 2⅜.

Gold worth £10,000 was sent into the Bank from China. The Victoria has taken £57,918 in Mexican dollars, chiefly for Hong Kong.

An inquiry prevailed for bar silver, and transactions occurred at 43 1-16d per ounce, or 1-16d higher. The final price was 43d to 43⅛d. Indian exchanges were unaltered, but bills in Shanghai rose ⅛d, to 4s 3⅛d. Rupee Paper advanced ⅛; the Four and a Half per Cents. were quoted 71⅛, ⅜, and the Four per Cents. 67⅛, ⅜.

German Bourses showed some irregularity. At Berlin, Prussian Three and a Half and Four per Cents., Russian, Italian, and Hungarian were rather better; but Egyptian, Austrian Gold and Credit, Mexican, Deutsche Bank, and Lombardo declined. The Paris market was firm, especially for Rio Tinto, Suez Canal, Panama, Crédit Foncier, Ottoman Bank, and Portuguese. Greek, however, receded. Three per Cent. Rentes rose 10c, to 82f 62½c, and the Four and a Half per Cents. 15c, to 105f 80c. At 25f 34½c the exchange on London (cheques) was unaltered.

The following official comparative statement of the revenue receipts of the Cape Colony for the two months of July and August, 1887 and 1888 respectively, has been received:

A prospectus has been issued of the Hummum's Hotel and Rockley's (Limited), an undertaking formed to purchase the old-established hotel in Covent-garden, as well as the adjoining restaurant and wine and spirit stores. The whole of the property is held under lease from the Duke of Bedford for a term of eighty years from 1885, at a ground rent of £410 per annum. The capital is £50,000, in 5,000 shares of £10 each, of which 4,000 are offered to the public, and 1,000 taken by the vendor.

It is announced that the Bank of Montreal will pay, on and after Nov. 1, the coupons for interest then due on the Province of Quebec Five per Ct. Loans of 1874 and 1876, and on the Corporation of the City of Montreal Loans of 1874 and 1879.

A special general meeting of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company will be held on Nov. 19, at Montreal, to authorise the terms of a lease of the extension of the Ontario and Quebec Company's line from London, Ontario, to a point on the Detroit River.

For the second week in October the Mexican Central Railway gross earnings were $91,259, against $94,615 last year. Those of the Guadalajara line amounted to $12,123. The Dutch Rhenish Railway receipts for the eight days ended Oct. 15 were £2,961, or £750 in excess of 1887. For the past month the Dunaburg and Witepsk Railway receipts amounted to 350,196 roubles, against 311,410 roubles last year. The Buenos Ayres and Pacific Railway earnings for the week ended Oct. 14 were $22,400. For the second week in October the gross earnings of the New York, Ontario, and Western Railway amounted to $32,091, being $1,067 more than in 1887. The telegram adds: "West Point Tunnel caved Tuesday night; blockade uncertain; estimated ten days. Trains worked vià Erie." The net earnings of the Quebec Central Railway for September were $8,131, compared with $6,436 last year. ## METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS.

The weekly meeting of the Metropolitan Board of Works was held yesterday, at the offices, Spring-gardens, Lord Magheramorne presiding.

A letter was read from Mr. Alexander Hawkins, one of the representatives of St. George-the-Martyr, stating that after the expression of opinion of the vestry of that district with respect to the Royal Commission which inquired into the working of the board he felt called upon to resign his seat. It was decided to notify the vestry of the resignation.

The Works Committee recommended that the board should join with the City Corporation in giving notice that a bill would be introduced into Parliament next year for a renewal of the coal and wine dues. The committee believed that a majority of the inhabitants of the metropolis were in favour of the renewal of the dues. Having regard to the views expressed by Lord R. Churchill, that if the majority of the ratepayers expressed themselves as favourable to the renewal the Government would modify their objection, it was desirable that the subject should be dealt with by the new County Council, which would come fresh from the ratepayers.

Mr. E. R. Cook, in moving the adoption of the recommendation, remarked that the board should be liberal in giving notices of new bills. They should hand over the affairs of the board to its successors in as good working order as possible.

Mr. Edwards would be surprised if the House of Commons were to entertain the idea of renewing the dues.

Mr. Runtz doubted whether any considerable sum would be received by the metropolis under the new Act, whilst it was certain that increased responsibilities would be thrown upon the local governing body.

Colonel Hughes, M.P., hoped the dues might be retained, the money being required for the purpose of making bridges and tunnels and for maintaining and creating open spaces.

On a division the recommendation was agreed to by 31 votes to 5.

The Works Committee reported that in their opinion it was inexpedient at the present time to propose schemes for dealing with certain areas in Bell-lane, Whitechapel, Great Pearl-street, Whitechapel, Horseferry-road, Greenwich, and four areas in Shoreditch, recent inquiries having shown that in all these districts there were numerous vacant rooms suitable for artisans and labourers. The committee recommended that no improvement schemes under the Artisans' Dwellings Improvement Acts be prepared for the next session of Parliament.

Mr. Ilsley moved an amendment that the report, so far as it related to the Whitechapel areas, should not be approved, and that the necessary steps be taken to submit improvement schemes for those districts to Parliament.

Mr. Cushen seconded the amendment, urging that the board would be failing in their duty if they neglected to deal with an area which had been scheduled for years.

Mr. Shepherd thought that the persons who had been most benefited by the administration of the Artisans' Dwellings Acts were those who held insanitary property which they had allowed to fall into disrepair. These improvement schemes should be left to the board's successors.

Mr. Lindsey considered that the board would not be justified in building accommodation for people who had already more rooms than were required.

Mr. Cook supported the amendment, pointing to the congested condition of Whitechapel, as shown by the deputation which waited on the board last week. He would prefer that the responsibility of allowing thousands of persons to continue to live in these wretched slums should rest on the County Council rather than on that board.

Mr. Selway said the board had already expended £400,000 in the Whitechapel district in re-housing 32,000 people; but he did not find that the poor of London could obtain dwellings any cheaper, notwithstanding the enormous expense which the board had incurred.

The amendment was lost by twenty to fifteen, and the recommendation of the committee was then approved.

It was decided to apply to Parliament next session for powers to carry out as metropolitan improvements the widening of Kensington High-street, between Kensington Church and Palace Gardens, at an estimated net cost of £169,500, and the widening of a portion of Mare-street, Hackney, at a net cost of £167,000.

THE CANONBURY MURDER.

At the Clerkenwell Police-court, yesterday, Henry Glennie, 24, hot-water fitter, was charged on remand, before Mr. Horace Smith, with being concerned with others not in custody in wilfully murdering Frances Maria Wright, aged seventy-one, at No. 12, Canonbury-terrace, on May 16 last.

Mr. Mead, instructed by Mr. Frayling, prosecuted for the Treasury; and Mr. Metcalfe defended.

Phœbe Field, of 17, Percival-street, Clerkenwell, said about seven or eight weeks ago she was living in Hamilton-court, King's-cross-road. About seven weeks ago witness went out with Mrs. Parsons, a neighbour, to a public-house, and afterwards returned to her house, where she met the prisoner, who said he wanted a wash and something to eat. He had been, he said, to some place in the country, the name of which she could not remember, and had lived on nothing but hop tea. He had two parcels, one wrapped in a pocket-handkerchief and the other in brown paper. He went away, taking his bundles with him, saying he was going home to his mother, but he came back the same evening, and had tea with witness and Mrs. Parsons. Subsequently he went to witness's house, and proposed that she should go and live with him. She agreed to this, sold up the furniture at her house next day, and took lodgings off Caledonian-road. On the day after the removal a man named Edwards, with whom witness had been living in Hamilton-court, came to these lodgings, and quarrelled and fought with prisoner about her. Prisoner said to Edwards, "I will meet you in the night. I should get hung for six or seven the same as I would for one." She continued to live with Glennie for about a week, until Edwards came again. The prisoner had no work during this time, but he went out to look for employment. When she had been with him three or four days the prisoner said, "If you remain with me, I have got something to tell you." They went upstairs, and the prisoner said, "I done the Canonbury murder." I said, "No, never!" and he said, "Yes, I did. I said, 'Mother, don't scream, and I won't hurt you.' With that she did scream, and I hit her on the side of the head, and she fell down behind the door. I then said to Long Bob, 'I have killed her.' At the time Long Bob was looking at her pockets, and he found £17 and some coppers and silver, but we did not take the money, because Long Bob said, 'You had better make haste out, you have killed her.' Me and Long Bob ran away, and while we were running a Frenchwoman ran after us. I turned round to hit the woman, and she ran away. I found it was too hot when running away, and I threw the bag between two vans. By the time I got home the soles of my boots had come off through running, and I fell down, I was so faint and tired." He added, "If the bag has been found they will be sure to know whose it is, and will find out who done the murder." He was not affected or excited when he told the story. The night before he told her all this he was dreaming. She woke him up, and he said, "Yes; I was dreaming about what I was going to tell you—the Canonbury murder." She said, "Ain't you going to tell me about it, then?" and he replied, "No; I will leave it till to-morrow night." It was the next night that he told her all. He was talking in his sleep when she woke him. Witness said to Glennie, "Ain't you ashamed of yourself?" and he replied, "No; I told her not to scream, and then I would not have hurt her." He also said, "Woe betide anybody who tells of me. They will be killed, if not by me, then by some of my friends." At the house off Caledonian-road she saw a dark girl called Polly Dominey, who had called to see the landlady, Mrs. Parsons. Witness had quarrelled with Dominey. Glennie was present, and took the latter's part. On the night when he confessed about the murder, Glennie had said, "It was one of the girls that worked there who told me to go about it," and he told the witness that when she (witness) and Dominey quarrelled he had been obliged to take Polly's part, because she knew something about it. He said also, "When we went to Mrs. Wright's, Long Bob, Mrs. Parsons' eldest son, and a girl were with me. The others stood outside while me and Long Bob went in." He then repeated that he had been down in the country for seven weeks, and had lived on hop tea. The reason why he came back, he said, was because he thought he would not be known after being away so long. Witness left the prisoner, and two days before she left him he gave her two coats to pawn—a black coat and a brown overcoat. He said, referring to the black one, "You had better take that one, because it has got some stains on it." Witness said, "Is it blood?" and the prisoner said, "No, it is what I tried some gold with." He said, "I shan't wear this black coat any more, because it is the coat I done the murder in, and I should be known in it." She pawned the coats, and got 3s on them. (The coats were produced in court.) She handed the prisoner the ticket and the money. He also showed her a black waistcoat and two pairs of trousers—one black and the other light. He said he should be known in the waistcoat, because he had that on when he did the murder. He gave all these to the youngest Parsons—Samuel Parsons. When she left the prisoner she went back to Edwards, and lived with him afterwards at 17, Percival-street. She parted with Glennie in a friendly way, and saw him from time to time afterwards. The last time witness saw the prisoner he told her he thought he was being followed by detectives.

Cross-examined by Mr. Metcalfe, the witness said on Aug. 27 she went to the police-station for the purpose of charging Edwards with an assault. She charged Glennie with the murder then because she was in fear. Glennie had never assaulted her. She had given her address as Percival-street because she still paid rent there, but she had not been there for three weeks. She was living at a policeman's house as servant. She had been living with Edwards for nearly three years and a half continuously before she went to live with Glennie. Edwards was a diamond polisher by trade, but he had recently been working as a broker. She had partly kept him and he had partly kept her. She had never seen Glennie before the day on which she consented to go and live with him. Witness had not previously read about the Canonbury murder; she could not read. She had simply heard that there had been a murder in Canonbury, but she did not know the particulars. Was not acquainted with Long Bob. She continued to live with Glennie for four days after he told her about the murder. She knew that Polly Dominey had worked at Mrs. Wright's, but the prisoner had not informed her that it was Dominey who had told him to go to Mrs. Wright's; he had only said, "It was one of the girls who worked there that told me to."

George Tarling, assistant to Robert Master, of 315, Gray's Inn-road, pawnbroker, produced two coats pawned with him on July 30 last by the last witness for 5s, in the name of Anne Evans, of 2, City-road.

The prisoner, who reserved his defence, was then committed for trial.

GUILDHALL.—BAD MEAT.—James Blackwell, dairyman, of the Tan Office, Burwell, Cambridge, was summoned at the instance of the Commissioners of Sewers for sending the carcase of a diseased cow to the Aldgate Market, intending it for human food.—Mr. Baylis prosecuted.—Dr. W. Sedgwick Saunders said that he had seen the carcase of the animal in question. It had suffered from fever. The liver and kidneys were diseased, and it was totally unfit for human food. Had the meat been eaten it would have proved highly dangerous.—Mr. Alderman Renals said that in his opinion it was a very bad case, and fined defendant £10 and costs.

MARLBOROUGH-STREET.—THE LADY AND THE BEGGAR.—Fanny Rice, 50, a needlewoman, of Cambridge-road, Kilburn, was charged with begging in Oxford-street on Thursday afternoon.—The prisoner said that a good kind lady commiserated with her in her poverty, and on her stating that she was an old servant, and that she should be obliged if she would relieve her, as she had been out of work for a long time, the lady replied, "Certainly, with the greatest pleasure. Here are 2s for you, which will pay for your lodging." Then the good kind lady inquired whether she had any food, and on being told "Only a few pieces of dry bread," she handed her another shilling, saying that she could afford it, as she would never want.—Mr. Newton: You must not go begging in the streets. Take this warning. If you are ever found begging in the streets again you will be sent to prison. Keep in Kilburn, and don't come into this district.

THAMES.—BRUTAL HUSBANDS.—George Courtney, 45, of 34, Baker-street, Stepney, was charged on a warrant with assaulting his wife Frances.—Prosecutrix said she had been married to the accused twenty-two years. On Tuesday night he came home drunk, and commenced quarrelling. Because witness would not let her son get him some more beer prisoner caught hold of her and punched her about the head and face several times. He had subjected her to ill-usage for years. Eleven years ago he was sentenced to two months' hard labour for cutting open her head with the tea-pot. In March last he was also sentenced to two months' hard labour for severely assaulting her. Prisoner now said he was sorry for what he had done, and pleaded for forgiveness, saying he would never touch drink again.—Mr. Lushington said that a pardon would be no warning to the accused. He would be sentenced to three months' hard labour. There would be an order of judicial separation, and prisoner would have to allow his wife 12s. a week.—David Bailey, of 1, Rhodeswell-road, Limehouse, was charged with unlawfully wounding his wife, Susan Bailey.—Prosecutrix stated on Thursday night her husband came home drunk. She had pledged her boots to get him a meal. At 9.30 he came in, called her offensive names, and threw a plate at her. It caught her on the head and made a bruise. The accused then rushed at her, pulled out an open knife from his pocket, and made a stab at her throat. She put up her left arm to protect her throat, and received a wound on the arm. Eventually she rushed upstairs and jumped out of the first-floor window to get out of his way. Before stabbing her he kicked her three times on the back, and when she tried to get away he punched her in the face, felling her to the ground, and then kicked her in the stomach.—Constable Brind, 463 K, said he arrested prisoner, who said, "I didn't stab her." When coming out of the house, Bailey said to his wife, "You ——, I'll give you a —— sight more when I come out."—Dr. George R. Anderson attended, and said he examined prosecutrix, who was suffering from abrasions on the inner side of the left forearm, contusions over the left elbow, and complained of being kicked in the back, but he added that the injuries could not have been inflicted with a knife.—Mr. Lushington said it appeared prosecutrix had told an untruth about prisoner stabbing her. It was clear the accused hit his wife with a plate and threatened her. He would have to find a surety in £10 to keep the peace for six months, or go to prison for one month.

CHARGE AGAINST A PUGILIST.—At the West Sussex sessions, at Chichester, yesterday, before Mr. Johnson, Q.C., Charles Mitchell, the pugilist, surrendered to his recognisances on a charge of being concerned in a prize fight near Goodwood, on Aug. 3. There were ten counts in the indictment, alleging, among other things, a riot, unlawful assembly, assault, and conspiracy to assault. Mr. Gratwick Boxall appeared for the prosecution, and Mr. C. F. Gill defended Mitchell, who pleaded not guilty. The police gave evidence as to finding a crowd assembled round a ring in which were three persons, one of whom was the defendant, and that the latter ran away. All the paraphernalia necessary for a prize fight was there, and it was shown that after the defendant's arrest a fight took place near the spot. This evidence was objected to. The jury found the defendant not guilty, and the verdict was received with loud cheering.

THE CRIMES ACT.—At Donegal, yesterday, Judge Webb confirmed, on appeal, the sentence of twelve months' imprisonment passed, under the Crimes Act, on Michael Hanlon, of Dungloe, for intimidating the sheriffs' officers.

THROAT AFFECTIONS AND HOARSENESS.—All suffering from irritation of the throat and hoarseness will be agreeably surprised at the almost immediate relief afforded by the use of "Brown's Bronchial Troches." These famous "lozenges" are sold everywhere at 1s 1½d per box. People troubled with a "hacking cough," a "slight cold," or bronchial affections, cannot try them too soon, as similar troubles, if allowed to progress, result in serious pulmonary and asthmatic affections. See that the words "Brown's Bronchial Troches" are on the Government stamp around each box.—(ADVERTISEMENT.)

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

NOTES AND ANTICIPATIONS.

Except in the continuation of splendid weather the second day at Sandown Park bore poor comparison to the first. The sport was only moderate, the principal feature being the victory of Powder Puff in the Temple Plate, which compensated Mr. Hammond for the failure of Laureate in the Orleans Nursery. The verdict was stoutly disputed by Aureoline, who, in the hands of a stronger boy, might have been successful. Mainbeam pulled up lame, so that there is an excuse for his defeat in the Malden Handicap, and the winner, Vixen, only realised seventy guineas. Quakeress turned herself into a profitable filly for Mr. A. B. Carr, when, in the absence of Aristos, she carried off the Hersham Two-Year-Old Stakes, and, had Lucy Long not been coughing, James Waugh would probably have trained a third winner. As it was she succumbed in the Nursery Handicap by "heads" to Carnival and Athol Lass, of whom the latter had put up a penalty of 7lb for a Newmarket victory. Devonshire Lass completely reversed her Croydon running when she vanquished Corinia in the Park Selling Plate, and with the Railway Plate confined from the bottom turn to a couple of successful candidates on the first day, Abeyance easily outstayed Theosophist. In the course of the afternoon there was some Cambridgeshire trade, and once 100 to 15 could be obtained about Mamia, who had been restricted to cantering exercise. Although the rumours afloat concerning this filly—added to the fact that her last week's work has included a two-mile sweat and a so-called trial—have awakened feelings of uneasiness, she subsequently recovered a little of her lost ground, and I hope that when stripped for battle next Tuesday she will not betray signs of deterioration since the Champion Stakes. Témbreuse is now quoted as a fractional favourite, and in other respects the quotations do not exhibit any material change. A few gallops are likely to take place to-morrow, and they will doubtless be speedily reflected in the market. Oliver Twist has been struck out, and the field may hardly reach two dozen in number.

KAISER, KING, AND POPE.

[FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.]

ROME, Oct. 15.

As though to emphasise the main purpose of the German Emperor's visit to Italy, the "Kaiser-Wetter," or Imperial weather, which William II. is understood to regard as one of the valuable appanages inherited by him from his venerable grandfather, and which had accompanied him hither from Vienna, endured until the close of the day on which the grand military review was held in his honour, and then, having fulfilled its mission, abruptly forsook the land of the cypress and myrtle, and betook itself to other climes. The luckless guests of the Municipio had scarcely drifted away into the dark, cold night, through the Capitolian portals—over which should have been inscribed the warning words, "Abandon overcoats, and likewise wrappers, all ye who enter here!"—when heavy clouds, quite insular in their denseness and gloom, began to overcast the sky; and by noon of yesterday Rome was thrown into deep shadow by a canopy of sullen grey vapour, in the opaque folds of which lurked a threat, only too speedily and ruthlessly to be fulfilled. Soon after the "tocco" a raging thunderstorm broke over the city, followed by torrents of rain, which, with scarcely an interval of half an hour's duration, have continued to fall until now. As I write (eleven p.m., on the eve of the Emperor's departure for Naples) the rain is dashing fiercely against my windows, and a bleak wind is moaning in the deserted Piazza outside. All the open-air entertainments in which William II. was to have taken part during the past forty-eight hours have been knocked on the head by this untimely freak of the elements. Yesterday evening the Forum, the Coliseum, the Temples of Venus and Claudian, and all the antique glories of Mount Palatine were to have been illuminated a giorno by electric light and many-coloured Bengal fires, for the Kaiser's special delectation; moreover, one of the "girandole" displays for which Rome has long been celebrated had been arranged to take place. As the evening drew in drenched municipal guards might be seen at well-nigh every street corner putting up announcements headed by the impressive initials "S. P. Q. R.," and acquainting the citizens of Rome with the inevitable postponement "to some future time" of the illuminations, "by reason of the cruel and intemperate weather." Consequently, after the State banquet at the Quirinal, to which about fifty personages of distinction, besides Court officials and the military suites of the German and Italian monarchs and princes, were bidden, William II. retired to his apartments at a comparatively early hour, and went to bed betimes, being booked for a matutinal excursion of the picnic order to Tivoli. The Royal carriages were ordered for eight a.m.; breakfast was to be served al fresco near the Falls at midday; and the illustrious holiday-makers, after doing Tivoli exhaustively, were to be back at the Quirinal by four p.m., in time for certain receptions which Kaiser Wilhelm and King Humbert had signified their intention of holding at that hour.

All these promising arrangements "went into water," as the Italian saying hath it, fairly drowned and washed away by the rain, which kept on pouring down with a settled and malignant hostility to would-be sightseers that must have rejoiced the hearts of the Roman military and civil authorities—to whom the mere idea of permitting the natives of this city and, above all, its foreign visitors to obtain even a bird's-eye glimpse of any public ceremonial or celebration is obviously gall and wormwood. His German Majesty stayed at home all day; the receptions were got through immediately after luncheon, instead of at the time originally fixed for them; and at about half-past three the Kaiser drove to the Coliseum in a close carriage, subsequently visiting the Foro Romano and the Palace of the Cæsars. There are few sights more depressing than the aspect of these ancient monuments on a wet day; but the young Emperor is by nature gifted with such high spirits that very possibly he may have enjoyed contemplating the relics of Imperial Rome, so to speak, under a douche. It would seem, however, that the festive element of his visit to this city is beginning to pall upon him, despite his remarkable elasticity of temperament; for he excused himself at the eleventh hour from attending the entertainment organised in his honour this evening by the German Club, whose "ricevemento" consequently fell somewhat flat; so I am told, at least, for foreign journalists were not honoured by invitation to the festivity in question, and I believe that even the members of the "Verein" had to pay for their tickets of admission.

As far as the naval review and launch at Naples, whither the Court and a certain number of privileged press-men are about to migrate, are concerned, the omens are unpropitious, for it has been raining and blowing là-bas all day long as persistently as here, and there are reasons why the "Umberto I." should not be committed to the waters of the bay unless the sea be smooth, and the sky free from atmospheric disturbances. Be the weather wet or fine, the ironclads will execute their appointed "march-past" before Kaiser and King. The "Varo," however, will probably be postponed; unless, indeed, meteorological matters should take a favourable turn by Wednesday morning. Meanwhile, sad accounts have reached us of the damage done to all the out-of-door decorations by the rain storms of yesterday and to-day. Trophies, wreaths, and painted pennons are pitiably smudged and stained; fresh gilding and colour have everywhere suffered a "general average"; bunting is mournfully soppy and limp, with never a flutter in its clammy folds; and the municipality of Naples has just discovered that the city is short of gas, a circumstance that will considerably mitigate the splendour of the projected general illumination. Thousands of additional troops and policemen have been despatched hence to Naples in order to prevent the public—especially the "invitati"—from seeing anything in which they may take the least interest. This measure is in perfect keeping with the proceedings of the authorities here ever since the Kaiser's arrival. The remembrance of how they were despitefully used in connection with the review at Cento Celle will rankle in the minds of the Romans for many a year to come. English journals, as a rule, are tolerably outspoken on the subject of official blundering and executive brutality whenever—and it is rarely, I rejoice to say—they are called upon to comment upon the misbehaviour of our public servants. But their sternest diatribes are veritable hymns of praise compared to the denunciations and objurgations hurled at the Italian War Office and police administration by the Roman press, which has been especially prodigal of withering satire to the municipality, anent the distressing fiasco of last Saturday night at the Campidoglio. The Riforma, a Government organ, twits the Municipio with the indecency of some of its decorations, and the sordidness of its "worsted flags and dirty curtains," pointing out that its arrangements for receiving its guests, instead of being dictated by decorum and dignity, had resulted in "most abominable confusion and shameful noise, equally revolting to eye and ear. It was a real sin that a happy idea should have found such unhappy expression." And the Tribuna, a journal well-affected to the Powers that be, writes: "It is impossible to describe the scene that took place when the guests were leaving the Campidoglio; yells, curses, demoniac struggles, confusion without end; the general voice shouting, 'What horrors! Che razze di disposizioni! Che teste!'" These ejaculations are untranslatable; only those of your readers who are familiar with Italian idioms will appreciate their pregnancy. The irony of the whole thing is that this is supposed to be a country really ruled by its people, in which Demos is lord, and the House of Savoy a mere trimming, as it were, of his royal mantle. The very journals that receive their inspiration from Italian official sources are so irrepressibly democratic that they invariably refer to the German Emperor as "William," tout court, and to their own king as "Humbert," without any title or predicate, while they carefully describe the Premier as the "Honourable Crispi." Why should the Kaiser be treated in this hail-fellow-well-met way by Roman reporters and leader-writers? After all, he is the guest of the Italian nation, not a baker's boy or a waiter at a restaurant. Surely King Humbert, the model of what a constitutional monarch should be, has deserved to be spoken of with some slight show of respect by the persons who shape public opinion in the capital of his kingdom. At any rate, it seems somewhat inconsistent with the democratic scorn of exalted rank and station that prompts these haughty scribes to address Emperors and Kings—only in print, I need scarcely say—by their Christian names, that the Roman people, which takes its tone from its newspapers, should submit to be hectored, bullied, chevied about, and generally sate upon by the armed and uniformed agents of an authority emanating from themselves. This, however, is only one of many disagreeable anomalies patent to the observant eye in Modern Italy, one and indivisible, and particularly in the strangely transmogrified city which Italian patriots, with significant insistance, glory in describing as "Intangible Rome."

I have good authority for stating that the German Emperor was favourably impressed on Saturday morning by the steadiness and quickness with which the line battalions changed their formations at the close of the march-past. Their handiness in this respect bears testimony to the efficiency of their drill and training, and, even to so resolute a stickler for "tenue" as William II., atones to a great extent for the slovenliness of their appearance and the uncouthness of their bearing. The Kaiser has repeatedly complimented Italian generals—a large number of whom have been presented to him by the King on different occasions—upon the skill with which regimental officers handle their men, and upon the intelligent exactitude with which the latter obey and carry out the word of command. His Majesty has bestowed Prussian decorations of the higher classes upon the divisionnaires, generals of brigade, and colonels temporarily acting as brigadiers, who were in charge of the troops paraded before him on the 13th inst. He has thoroughly taken stock of the Italian army, to do so in person having been one of the chief objects of his visit to this country; and, to judge from his utterances upon the subject, and from the technical value of the honorific distinctions conferred by him on Italian officers of various ranks, the result of his investigations has been an eminently satisfactory one. This, at least, is certain, that his expectations have been surpassed, and in a sense highly flattering to the effective strength of Italy as a military Power. He will return to Berlin, I am assured, with a far higher opinion of the value of the Italian alliance to Germany than that which he entertained previously to his sojourn in Rome.

THE EMPEROR WILLIAM.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.]

ROME, Oct. 19.

The Emperor William rose early this morning and went to the military parade ground to witness the manœuvres of a battalion of Bersaglieri.

At a military banquet given last evening by the officers of the Alpine Regiments, who were present to the number of 150, General Pelloux, the commander of the Alpine division, in returning thanks for the toast of his health, said: "I am proud to command soldiers pledged, if necessary, to die for the independence and glory of their country. In my opinion the watchword of the Alpine troops is confined to these few words, 'No passage this way.' Our country has appointed us to defend the frontier which, we hope, will never be attacked, but which, should the occasion arise, would be defended with unflinching steadfastness."

The Emperor William took leave of the Queen and the Princesses after luncheon to-day. At a quarter to three his Majesty left the Quirinal, accompanied by the King, the Prince of Naples, the Dukes of Aosta and Genoa and their suites. In the Royal waiting-room at the railway station the Emperor and his Royal host took leave of each other, with the greatest cordiality. The Emperor also embraced the Prince of Naples and the Dukes of Aosta and Genoa. His Majesty then turned to Signor Crispi to bid him farewell, and entered into a short conversation with the Premier, expressing the hope that he might pay another visit to Italy at some future time accompanied by the Empress. The Emperor also said a few words in reference to the political importance of his visit to Rome. The King accompanied his Majesty to the Imperial carriage, remaining in conversation with him until the train started. The route from the Quirinal to the station was lined with troops, who presented arms as the cortège passed. The military bands played the German National Anthem. There was a large number of spectators, who gave the departing Emperor a farewell ovation. On returning from the station to the Quirinal the King was enthusiastically cheered by the crowd. During his stay at Naples the Emperor presented Signor Crispi with his photograph, bearing his Majesty's autograph and the date.

The impression left by the Emperor upon all classes with whom he has come in contact in Italy has been most favourable. The cordiality of his manner has been everywhere remarked, and in official circles the frankness with which his Majesty disposed of all the ambiguous constructions which could be placed upon his visit to the Pope has met with warm recognition and appreciation. The general feeling with respect to his stay in Italy is that it has certainly tended to draw closer the bonds uniting Italy with the German Empire.

BERLIN, Oct. 19.

The Germania asserts that after the interview between Count Herbert Bismarck and the Pope, communications passed between the Emperor William, Prince Bismarck, and Signor Crispi.

SIR M. MACKENZIE'S BOOK.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAM.]

BERLIN, Oct. 19.

Professor Tobold to-day addresses a long letter to the Berliner Politische Nachrichten, in reply to the statements made with respect to him in Sir Morell Mackenzie's book. He begins by declaring that Sir Morell did not wish a post-mortem examination of the late Emperor to take place, and then proceeds to give the most positive denial to the assertion that on May 20, 1887, he refused to undertake an endolaryngeal operation for the removal of a particle for microscopic examination because he was unable to do so. The protocol signed by Dr. Wegner, says the professor, bears him out in this denial. The reason why he declined to operate was that he thought that it was the business of the proposer of the plan to provide the required particle himself. Professor Tobold next criticises severely the manner in which the operation was eventually performed, and passing on to consider the course advised by the German doctors, says: If the thyrotomy urgently recommended by us had not been prevented, the Emperor would in all probability have lived a number of years, and even if recurrence had taken place there would still have remained the opportunity for a cutting operation on the left side of the larynx. The time for both these operations was, however, allowed to slip by. As for total extirpation, no one could recommend it. In conclusion, the Professor declares that, if Sir Morell had abstained from using what the letter describes as "his baneful forceps," and had confined himself to negative methods while awaiting the inevitable tracheotomy, the life of the Emperor might have been preserved for a longer time than it was.

The barometer is reported to be generally rising and the anti-cyclone to be extending from the Eastward. Continued fine weather is therefore probable in most Districts.

A DISORDERLY HOUSE.—At the Surrey Sessions, yesterday, before Sir William Hardman, Elizabeth Serwens, 44, was indicted for keeping a disorderly house at 18, Kell-street, London-road.—The prisoner, whose defence was that she was not the person in charge, was convicted, and Sir William Hardman said the accused had doubtless acted as a go-between or caretaker, and must suffer for her part in the transaction. He ordered her to pay a fine of £10 and to remain in prison until it was paid, and added that the owner ought to pay the amount for her. In two other cases from the parish of St. Olave a similar penalty was imposed.

TOBACCONISTS COMMENCING.—For advice how to open respectably from any amount, however small or large, tobacconists commencing business of each write for illustrated catalogue, post free, to Lesser Friedlander, Tobacconists' Complete Furnisher (Wholesale), 1, Houndsditch, London. ## THE FISHERIES TREATY.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAM.]

OTTAWA, Oct. 19.

At a banquet given last night by the working men of Canada to the Hon. J. A. Chapleau, Secretary of State, Sir John Macdonald, who was among the guests, made a speech in which, referring to the Fisheries Treaty, he expressed the belief that when the Presidential election in America was over, and the people of the United States had regained their characteristic calm and coolness, they would look with more favourable eyes upon the Treaty, and would have another arrangement based upon the same lines. If not, continued the Premier, then the course of the Canadian Government was plain. They would rely upon the Treaty of 1818, and let the law take its course. If any difficulty arose as to the construction of that Treaty, Canada must find some way, by arbitration or otherwise, to determine its true and legal meaning.

The banquet was attended by over seven hundred persons.

PRICES FOR FUTURE DELIVERY.

NEW YORK, Oct. 19.—Wheat business opened this morning at an advance of ⅛c, the market being active. May sold early at 116⅜. Speculation was again the prominent feature. Prices gave way on realising by bulls, and, receiving no support from shippers, the closing is dull and heavy at rates unchanged to ⅛c down.

Sales, futures, 1,245,000 bushels; spot, 6,000 bushels. Receipts, 160,000 bushels; same day last year, 83,160 bushels. Clearances, 10,000 bushels.

Lard opened steady at a slight improvement for distant months, some trade being done for next May delivery at 8.54. Steadier advices from the West had a hardening influence, and with only a light demand from refiners and shippers the close is steady at 3 to 4 points improvement on former positions.

Sales, 1,000 tierces.

Coffee trading began at 30 points fall for October and November, and 35 points for December. Early sales showed some further decline, February changing hands at 13.40, and June at 13.50. A large business was concluded, and, in sympathy with European and Brazil advices and reports of heavy receipts, values fell away. The closing tone, however, is about steady at 20 to 30 points decline.

Sales, 97,500 bags.

Petroleum Pipe Line Certificates opened ⅛c lower at 92⅞c, and have been subject to bears hammering the market on reports of new wells. The market rallied slightly from the lowest point of the day, and closes about steady, at 85¾, being 6⅛c under yesterday.

Sales, 7,427,000 barrels; pipe-line runs, 42,000 barrels; shipment from regions, 82,000 barrels.

Copper continues inactive owing to reserve of sellers. For November the closing price is 1,800 asked, but there were no bids at this figure.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—Wheat was firm at the opening with ¼c to ⅜c up, May selling at 112⅞, and after some fluctuation closes firm for near deliveries, owing to local traders buying. May is ⅛c lower at the close, having been more freely sold. October closes ⅜c, November ⅜c, and December ⅜c over yesterday.

SOCIETY OF MEDICAL OFFICERS OF HEALTH.—At the annual meeting of this society, held yesterday afternoon at the Holborn Restaurant (Mr. Alfred Hill, M.D., presiding), the secretary's report showed that by the amalgamation of the society with the North-Western Association, the Yorkshire Association, and the Birmingham and Midland Association, the number of members amounted to 369, including sixty-four associates. The total payments amounted to £197 18s 1d, leaving a balance of £62 3s 11d. Dr. W. H. Corfield, M.D., M.A., F.R.C.P. (the President-elect), delivered an interesting address, entitled "The History of Sewage Disposal." After the meeting the members of the society dined together at the Holborn Restaurant.

Health and strength insured to old and young by the constant use of Dr. Ridge's delicious Patent Cooked Food. A speciality for infants, invalids, and the aged. ## PASTELS AT THE GROSVENOR GALLERY.

Considering the comparatively short notice which it was found possible to give to English artists desirous of manifesting their proficiency in the apparently simple, but really complicated art of pastel, or drawing in coloured crayons—an art which for a considerable period has not been cultivated to any marked extent in this country—the contributions of our own countrymen and countrywomen to the remarkable display of works in pastel which will be opened to the public on Monday next may be considered as in the highest degree encouraging. That the British exhibitors have—allowing for a few bright exceptions—attained the high degree of excellence shown by their friendly French rivals on the walls of the Grosvenor, it would be both idle and mischievous to assert. It must be borne in mind that our accomplished neighbours have for some time past enjoyed such advantages of organisation and public recognition as are afforded by a Society of Pastellists. They have not forgotten that such great French painters as Prudhon, Girodet, and Eugène Delacroix have not disdained to emulate the triumphs in past generations achieved by Maurice-Quentin de la Tour and Jean Baptiste Greuze, who have found followers in our own times in Piers, Michel Bouquet, Eugène Giraud, Antonin Moine, Steuben, Madame de Léoménil, Madame Stephen, and Mdlles. Allain and Petit-Jean, with many others the names of some of whom grace the catalogue of the instant exhibition at the Grosvenor. The popularity of pastel in France may be assigned to three very sufficing reasons; first, the superb proficiency of French artists as draughtsmen; next, their preference for body colour or gouache to transparent painting in watercolours; and lastly, the favour extended to elaborate drawings au fusain or in charcoal, and à la sanguine or in red chalk. Modern French pastel is artistically a happy marriage of red and black crayons with the colours of the rainbow as wedding favours; while technically it may be characterised as a kind of "dry distemper." So boldly and with such liberality of impasto, indeed, has body-colour been applied in some of the most notable French examples of pastel at the Grosvenor, that it is at first sight difficult to believe that the startling effects produced are due to the crayon and not to the brush. On the other hand the majority of the English contributors may be felicitated on their having almost entirely repudiated the bad old English traditions with regard to pastel as it used to be practised as one of the "accomplishments" in finishing schools for young ladies. It is one of the most shining virtues of this happily renovated art that it sanctions at once the practice of the most velvety softness and the most dashing hardihood in execution. Unfortunately the fair pupils at the Misses Pinkerton's Seminary have hitherto been taught that velvety softness and softness alone were the grand essentials in pastel, or "drawing in coloured crayons" (charged extra in the quarterly account); and the natural result has been that in innumerable drawing rooms and breakfast parlours of the highest respectability there may be found beautifully framed pastel drawings almost inconceivably inane and insipid in their woolliness of texture and feebleness of design. Some of our foremost painters who have studied abroad, or have been naturally gifted with breadth of view and decision of hand, have executed excellent works in pastel, but more as studies of the figure or memoranda of colour for studio use than with any view towards their public exhibition. Pastel, to sum up, has been for many years under a kind of iridescent cloud, sweetly pretty to look at, but presenting no tangible purport or significance to the outside world; but much will be done by the present display in New Bond-street to dispel the roseate mist, and reveal what pastel really is, and of what it is really capable.

One of the largest and most ambitious works in the gallery is (133) Mr. Herbert Schmalz's "In Manu Domini," the nude figure of a girl bound to an appropriately encrimsoned stake, and which is obviously a finished study for one of the personages in the clever artist's well-known and already exhibited picture of Christian martyrs in the Roman arena. The flesh tints in the figure are gently harmonious, and the drawing and modelling are altogether irreproachable. Against the painful nature of the subject it is too late to protest; but we may mildly dissent from Mr. Herbert Schmalz's over-earnestness of effort to make the texture of his work resemble an oil painting rather than a pastel drawing. This is a fault, by the way, visible in a large number of the English exhibits, in which the artists seem to be, in a manner, ashamed of their vehicle, and anxious to persuade the unwary that they have not abandoned the orthodox "Roberson's medium," or the traditional meguilp, ignoring the fact that pastel demands, and is eminently susceptible of, special and independent treatment, and that, without being either conspicuously chalky or blurred, it should never cease to display certain vaporous qualities. As a boldly graphic delineator of costumes and countenances, a most plastic modeller, and brilliant colourist very high praise indeed must be awarded to the five contributions of Madame—or Mademoiselle?—Anna Bilinska (1) "A Highlander of the Carpathians" (11), "A Young Polish Girl"; (68) "A Young Polish Woman"; (80) "A Young Polish Boy"; (93) another study of Polish portraiture, are all conspicuous for their vigour of handling and brightness of hue. The last is, perhaps, occasionally a little too voyant, but the fault is one on the right side. The Three Kings—not of Cologne, but of the pastel at the Grosvenor—are undeniably MM. Blanche, Machard, and Fantin-Latour. The first-named accomplished pastellist sends (29) "Portrait of Donna Olga Caracciolo," a charming presentment of a young girl, life-size, in a short frock and sable hose. The pose of the figure and the expression of the countenance are alike commendable, and the key of colour is tender, tempered, but luminous. Again in (52) "Mademoiselle Julia Bartet, of the Comédie Française," M. Blanche contributes a portrait which in originality and almost weird effectiveness may be considered unique in a singularly original and characteristic collection. The pale statuesque features of the lady first attract admiration; but it is with mingled feelings of appreciation and bewilderment that the spectator turns to the extraordinary arrangement which the painter has chosen for the dress and coiffure of his sitter. Mdlle. Bartet is presumably not in fancy dress, else in her sable robe, her immense swansdown pelisse, and her curiously tufted head-dress she might appropriately attend a bal costumé as an embodiment of Edgar Poe's "Raven," or even more suitably as "La Gazza Ladra"; but the perhaps unconsciously bizarre disposal of her attire and surroundings is amply atoned for by the magisterial handling and perfect manipulation of this truly grand portrait. In (96) M. Blanche has another super-excellent study of "An Infanta"; (153) by the same artist, "Portrait of Mademoiselle J. M.," introduces us to the refined face and graceful form of a young lady with very long, brown, pendent tresses, and a "coachwheel" hat of white tulle; and, finally, in (158) "Standing by a Kakemono," the same artist, always surpassingly clever, but once more slightly mysterious, depicts a little girl standing against a background in which a number of half-stuffed birds are predominant. We have heard of the Kakapo, or owl parrot, of New Zealand; but we confess that, up to the present time of writing, we have as much to learn of the habits of the Kakemono as of those of the renowned but occult Oozly bird. But, perhaps, a Kakemono is not a bird after all. M. Machard is, from his standpoint, as original and as powerful as M. Blanche. (3) is a splendid half-length vue de dos of a lady in a black hat, a black boa, and a white satin dress, all pourtrayed with equal cunning and force; (20) is a curiously realistic, but still fantastic, study entitled "Soap Bubbles"; (28) is a surprisingly able reproduction of the female semi-nude, marvellous in the treatment of the flesh-tints, and exceeding rich in colour; while in (76) M. Machard exhibits perhaps the crowning example of his genius as a portraitist in his figure of a stately lady, with a pearl necklace, and surroundings of a delicate mauve hue. In four pictures of commanding merit M. Fantin-Latour next challenges admiration. (70) "The Dance" is a purely poetic composition in the style once rendered so familiar, if not so popular, by the English Academician, Mr. Frost; but M. Fantin-Latour's figures lose anything which could be imputed to them as being of a risquée nature by the learned accuracy of the drawing and the exquisite grace of the attitudes. (138) "Ariadne" is another beautiful conception of female loveliness; dreamy and vaporeso, as we have already contended that the highest class of pastels should be; and (140) is a portrait full of technical skill and refined treatment.

Mr. J. M. Whistler is happily among the contributors to this most pleasant congress of pastilists; and in (4) (84) (85) (88) and (89) sends as many dainty little transcripts of Venetian life and scenery, sparkling with bright colour and full of atmospheric effect and chromatic suggestiveness. M. Leon Lhermitte makes in (6) "Confirmation Day," which perhaps might be more accurately entitled "The First Communion," a by no means unsuccessful essay in architectural genre, a style, however, to which pastel does not pre-eminently lend itself. The interior of the church, the priests in their rich vestments, the groups of white-veiled girls, the attentive congregation of male and female peasants, might have been as effectively rendered in oil or in water colour. But M. Lhermitte may plead and have his plea allowed, that modern pastellism claims to achieve excellence in every department of art. Mr. Buxton Knight has, in (2) "On the Parade, Hastings," and (7) another view of the same locality, two very bright little morceaux, more rapid jottings down of colour and effect than actual pictures, but replete with vivacity. (9) Mr. Percy Bigland's portrait of "Mrs. Cohen" is as faithfully minute a study of a calm and venerable countenance as a picture by Balthazar Denner; and sincere commendation should be extended to Mrs. Louise Jopling for the grace, refinement, and purity of colour manifest in (15) "Drusilla." Breadth and firmness mark (22) M. Montenard's "Road in the South of France"; and there is wonderful finish and richness of colour in (25), M. Emile Levy's "Painter's Daughter." Mr. Henry Simpson's (33) "King Ethalbold at Croyland Old Bridge" is so dazzling in its lights, and so broadly dense in its shadows, that at the first glance it might be taken rather for a transcript of Oriental, or at least of Southern Italian or Spanish scenery, than for a fragment of English architecture and English life. It is an extremely masterly performance. Mr. Llewellyn has drawn in (37) a wonderfully clever but rather eccentric portrait of a lady clad all in green and called "Waiting." The lady is fair to see; but she scintillates somewhat too vividly with verdant hues which appear to have been touched up with foil paper. There is no female pendant, we believe, to the mediæval sign of "The Green Man and Still," but were such an effigy required, Mr. Llewellyn would be the very artist to supply it. Remarkably vigorous and sunny in colour is (40) Mr. Frank Hind's "Spanish Calle"; and there are many fine qualities in (51) Mr. Heywood Hardy's "Sketch in the Great Sahara." Mr. G. P. Jacomb Hood's (57) "A Lady Artist" is agreeably decorative, alluring in colour, and altogether a pleasing departure from conventional portraiture. A cheerful, frank, unpretending specimen of rural genre is Miss Elizabeth Armstrong's (59) "The Maids were in the Garden Hanging out the Clothes;" and Miss Hilda Montalba is conspicuous in five examples, abundantly proving her thorough comprehension and complete mastery of pastel in its best phases. The most powerful of these fine works is the gifted lady's (191) "Portrait of Mrs. A. R. Montalba." Among the foreign pastellists whose works lend brilliance to this exceptionally interesting cabinet of gems must be mentioned MM. Besnard, Dubufe, Helleu, Nozal, Pointelin, Rousel, and Madame Louise Abbéma; and among well-known British artists Mr. W. Holman Hunt, Mr. W. F. Yeames, R.A., and Messrs. Ludovici, Aumonier, C. H. Shannon, J. J. Shannon, Solomon J. Solomon, Arthur Severn, G. A. Storey, W. J. Moore, Joseph Knight, W. S. Coleman, Mark Fisher, W. E. F. Britten, Mrs. F. Claxton, Miss A. Downes, and Mrs. Walter Creyke.

LYCEUM THEATRE.

Mr. Richard Mansfield very generously gave his services and those of his company, last evening, to aid the Bishop of Bedford's Home and Refuge Fund for the poor of the East-end of London. Not only that, but he undertook to produce a new play of a lighter and brighter kind than those weird romances and psychological studies with which his name has hitherto been identified. "Prince Karl" is an old-fashioned, indescribable, and illogical piece of nonsense which looks as if it preceded the modern era of farcical comedy. Strange to say, it was written by Mr. Archibald C. Gunter, who has since made his mark as a novelist, who writes his books in such perfect dramatic form that his annexors only require a peppering of connecting dialogue, a pot of paste, and a sharp pair of scissors. There is nothing particularly clever, witty, or ingenious in "Prince Karl." It reminds one more of a forced burlesque on serious drama than of a modern farcical comedy, and in intention recalls a wild piece of extravagance written for the elder Sothern years ago by Watts Phillips, and called "The Woman in Mauve." The plot is supposed to be serious, but the characters do farcical things. The mainstay or pivot of this absurd trifle is Mr. Mansfield, who occasionally reminds one of the daring attack of E. A. Sothern, combined with the eccentric ingenuity of Mr. Fred Leslie. He is as melodramatically impassioned as Sothern in his mock love speeches, and as whimsical as Leslie in his business. The play as it stands is so extremely bad, so invertebrate, so inconsequent, and so feeble from its own point of view, that we are the more inclined to recognise the talent, the ingenuity, and the versatility of the actor who can carry it to success on his own shoulders almost unaided. This is a kind of entertainment that is not as yet understood in England. It is manufactured for the sake of the single-handed entertainer to take round the country—an apology for a play, indescribable, unreasonable, improbable, which shows off an alert and clever star to the best advantage. We saw the same kind of thing with Fritz Emmett, and it has been perpetuated down to the semi-variety show, semi-entertainment of Miss Minnie Palmer. The object is not to exhibit a play, but to throw the lime-light on a particular artist. Years ago entertainments, as they were called, were written for Mr. W. S. Woodin, Miss Emma Stanley, or Mr. Howard Paul. They personated several characters with more or less success, they changed their dresses, they sang their songs, and made a few dull hours pass pleasantly enough. In the harmless trifle called "Prince Karl" Mr. Mansfield proves that he has at his command a strong vein of comedy, and that he is an actor of considerable resource. He can imitate better than he can sustain. His talent is in sketching idiosyncrasies of character rather than in strong impersonation. Quick, spontaneous, alert, he can keep the attention of the audience by some rapid outline, but he takes no time or trouble to fill it in. As yet he is essentially an entertainer, and a very clever one. He suggests; he does not elaborate. For instance, in this curious play, when an impecunious German Prince, who has entangled himself with an amorous widow, pretends to drown himself, and acts as courier to his innamorata sooner than sacrifice his future to a harridan, Mr. Mansfield is in reality never Prince or courier. Sometimes he is Mr. Jekyll, often he is inclined to hop about as Hyde, but he is always clever, amusing, and companionable. An artist so quick and so imitative, with so many gifts, mostly undisciplined, has in him all the makings of an actor of considerable moment. But he has evidently spent the best part of his time in entertaining, and has not as yet—owing to his conspicuous success in America—gone through the drudgery that even genius requires. In Prince Karl he entertains his audience as a clever young man would do single-handed at an evening party, and he does not pretend to do much more. Whatever he does he does well, but all who have watched Mr. Mansfield since his arrival in this country must have regretted that so much talent has been wasted on such inferior work. He has sensational exercises to show off with, but no "piece," as musicians call it, and even the pianist who flung off nothing but clever exercises would be recommended to go back and learn to recite a contained composition. So far as one can see, the comic vein is at present stronger in Mr. Mansfield than the tragic. He is a better comedian than a serious actor. Luckily for the comfort of last night's audience, Miss Carlotta Leclercq, a clever and impassioned actress, was at hand to help Mr. Mansfield with a task which she considerably lightened. It is dreadful to contemplate what might have happened had not Miss Leclercq kindly consented to appear as the modern version of Widow Green. Mr. Frankau gave a clever sketch of a shrewd Chicago lawyer, and Miss Beatrice Cameron, by her success as an American girl, showed exactly how it was she could not realise the classic Lesbia. The play, as it stood, was received remarkably well; but the house was not as full as it ought to have been, seeing that a new play had been arranged on purpose for a deserving charity.

THE MINERS' STRIKE.

A meeting of the North Wales Coalowners Association was held yesterday at Chester, to take into consideration the notice given by the underground workmen for an advance of 10 per cent. Mr. Henry Dennis, representing the Ruabon Coal Company and Lord Trevor's Colliery, presided. It was unanimously resolved that the advance asked for by the men be given, although the present state of the market does not justify it and the time is inopportune. The circumstances of the North Wales coal trade compel the owners to make contracts about June in each year for the greater portion of the output for the ensuing twelve months. It is also well known that for the last ten years the owners have received no interest for the capital invested by them, while there has been paid by the associated collieries alone over £300,000 a year in wages. Notwithstanding this fact, as the trade of this country, so much of which depends on coal, is improving, the coalowners are unwilling to put any check on it, and they therefore grant the advance, trusting that its effect will be not only to give an impetus to trade, but also to create a better feeling between the public, the employers, and the workmen, and produce some permanent arrangements whereby wages may be equitably adjusted from time to time without the recurrence of strikes and lock-outs and the misery and ruin attending them.

POLITICAL SPEECHES.

LORD HARTINGTON.

The Marquis of Hartington drove into Belfast yesterday afternoon from Craigavad, and was present at a reception held in the Reform Club by Sir Edward Porter Cowan and Lady Cowan. His Lordship was received with loud cheers, mingled with some hisses and hooting, by the large crowd which had assembled in the Royal Avenue. Altogether 800 invitations were issued for the reception. In the evening a public meeting was held in the Ulster Hall, and, the doors being opened an hour and a half before the speaking commenced, the building was soon crowded. On entering the hall, Lord Hartington was received with loud and prolonged cheering, and the waving of hats and handkerchiefs. The chair was taken by Mr. Thos. Sinclair, president of the Ulster Liberal Unionist Association. Acknowledging a resolution of welcome, his Lordship observed that his opponents had recently been saying his speech at Inverness was one of despondency. Lord Rosebery, Sir William Harcourt, and Mr. John Morley—(hisses)—had described it as a confession of hopelessness and failure. (Groans.) He would like to point out, however, that these observations went far to confirm almost all that the Unionists had said of the policy of their opponents. Those opponents were not seeking to pursue a constitutional policy by constitutional means. They were not trying to persuade the majority in Great Britain that their policy was consistent with the greatness and security of the Empire; they were not seeking to persuade the minority in Ireland that it was consistent with justice to them. In fact, they had failed to do this, but they were not at the end of their resources. If they could not persuade the British majority or the Irish minority, they could still attempt to coerce the will of that majority and minority and endeavour to obtain by threats, by bullying, and coercion what they could not extort from the Liberal Unionists' independent judgment. They had been told that if they did not settle their demands the Parnellites would prove that the Government of Ireland could be made impossible. That policy was not repudiated by the leaders and their allies in Great Britain. These were the things which now gave to the leaders of a great British party content and satisfaction—that it should still be acknowledged that something approaching to rebellion or civil war existed in parts of Ireland—these were the things which they hailed with satisfaction as proofs of the success of their policy; and from this confession of what it was that gave them content and satisfaction he thought they might form some estimate of the character of the policy which they were supporting. (Hear, hear.) The poison which had been distributed had prevented past remedial legislation having its full effect, but that was no reason why Unionists should abandon the struggle and allow that to take place which would intensify every evil under which Ireland ever had suffered or now was suffering. But had the policy which the Government had pursued been a failure? (Cries of "No.") He defied any one to point to any prosecutions which had taken place under the sanction of the Government which could be truly said to have been directed against political agitation or even against agitation of a seditious character. (Cheers.) Prosecutions had been taken against crime, incitement to crime, and opposition to the officers of the law, and also against that mischievous form of intimidation known as boycotting. But boycotting he denied to be a political offence. In carrying out these prosecutions Mr. Balfour had been conferring upon every honest man in Ireland the greatest boon and protection. Mr. Balfour deserved the greatest credit for the courage, the ability, and the labour he had devoted to the defence of every official in Ireland who had been engaged in the discharge of his duty in carrying out the law of the Imperial Parliament. (Cheers.) Never was a more base, false, and unfounded charge made against the Government of Ireland than that of having caused the death of Mr. Mandeville by maltreatment, and never had a false and calumnious accusation received a more crushing or complete reply than that made by Mr. Balfour the other day. (Cheers.) Mr. Gladstone, according to his fashion, had not taken the trouble to make himself acquainted with all the facts, but he had spoken at great length on the subject. (Laughter.) No doubt he had, according to his practice, carefully guarded himself, and had said that he expressed no opinion as to whether the death of Mr. Mandeville was directly due to the treatment of the prison officials or not. But he had referred to the coroner's inquest, to the composition of the jury, and commented on portions of the evidence in such a tone as to lead his audience to suppose that he was convinced that a strong primâ facie case existed that the death of Mr. Mandeville was due to the prison treatment. Mr. Gladstone had on this as on other occasions, been taken in and deceived by his Irish allies—(cheers)—and in his desire to embarrass and blacken the character of the Government, thought the case was too good to be neglected. One of the difficulties which had always been before Unionists was the doubt as to whether the proposals of the late Government would be accepted by the leaders of the Nationalist party as a final and complete settlement. He did not believe that it was in Mr. Parnell's or any other man's power to set a limit to the movement of which he was the head. But they were told that Mr. Parnell had achieved that which he himself had declared he could not achieve, and that he had limited the aspirations of the Irish people to that sort of provincial self-government which Mr. Gladstone offered. Now, however, some light was being thrown upon the question. The other day Mr. Dillon at Dundalk distinctly connected the men of '98, the men of '48, and the men of '67 with the men of '88, and he said the movement with which he was now connected was the same as was conducted by those men. In fact, Mr. Gladstone was placed in a position of inextricable difficulty by the demands of his party to do that which he had himself declared it was impossible to do. He believed that, so far from the Home Rule movement having made progress, it had retrograded. What was the necessity of an heroic or sensational policy for Ireland of any kind? That was not the principal need of Ireland. Ireland suffered mainly from the poverty of the country, caused to a large extent by the neglect to develop the material resources of Ireland. Parliament was willing to do everything in reason in the direction of the development of Ireland's resources. The Government were ready, if they could rely upon fair discussion from their political opponents, to propose measures for the development of those resources. They had already shown their willingness to do this in proposing plans for the completion of the drainage of certain districts. These measures would be passed if they were allowed to pass, but they could not be passed in the face of Irish obstruction. Home Rule might be the one panacea which might ultimately regenerate Ireland, but, until the time was come when the people of Great Britain and the minority in Ireland could be persuaded of this, why should the Imperial Parliament be condemned to inaction and paralysis? Was it thought that the Home Rule policy was a step towards the settlement of the land? On the contrary, it was an impediment. He did not think that the people of Great Britain would look favourably upon any great scheme of Irish land settlement, whether it was Mr. Gladstone's or any other, which involved a great expenditure of English capital or credit, until the British nation was better assured that law and order would be maintained in Ireland, that contracts would be observed, and that engagements entered into between individuals, as between nations, would be faithfully kept. (Cheers.) But if we were not ripe for the settlement of the Irish land question, there was one experiment which had been tried successfully under the operation of Lord Ashbourne's Act. Landlords who wished to sell to tenants who wished to buy had been brought together in voluntary contract, and agreements had been made to the mutual satisfaction and advantage of both. Why should that experiment not be renewed? If the plan had been adopted twenty years ago the Irish question would have now been very different. Let them not repeat the mistake then made—(cheers)—let them not neglect to-day to do that which experience had proved could be done with advantage and safety. (Cheers.) If he did not address them in a jubilant spirit, if he did not manifest a complete confidence that everything was for the best in the best of all possible worlds, it was because he saw too clearly the obstacles which still existed in the way of safe and beneficial progress in Ireland. As to the immediate cause in which Unionists were engaged, he felt neither doubt nor hesitation. The struggle in which they were engaged was of a twofold character. It commenced as a struggle between Union and Separation, but in its progress it had become a struggle of honesty against dishonesty, of order against disorder, of truth against falsehood, of loyalty against treason. In such a contest as that there was no room for compromise. One side or other must emerge victorious. He was reminded by one of the mottoes which he saw that "Time is On Our Side," and not alone time, but, in his opinion, truth and honour and justice were on their side also. (Cheers.) On the issue of that contest depended the possibility of safe and assured progress for Ireland, and as to the result of that contest he would never allow himself for one moment to despair. (Prolonged cheers.)

Lord NORTHBROOK and Mr. FINLAY, M.P., also acknowledged the resolution, and the proceedings terminated.

MR. BALFOUR.

Yesterday afternoon the Right Hon. A. J. Balfour, M.P. for East Manchester, was entertained at lunch by the members of the Carlton Club, Manchester. There was a large attendance. In responding to the toast of his health, Mr. BALFOUR remarked: Mr. Gladstone—if I am not misquoting him, as I think I am not—once said, speaking of measures of legislation, Ireland blocked the way. Ireland has not blocked our way. (Cheers.) Deeply as we are necessarily concerned with the welfare of that country, and much as our time and our attention is necessarily occupied by it, we have found time to go through a session almost unexampled for legislative activity and legislative successes. (Cheers.) Time fails me to go in detail over the work of Parliament during the seven months of the portion of the last session which was accomplished. But I think I ought to remind you of the great financial triumph of Mr. Goschen and of the great legislative triumph of Mr. Ritchie. (Hear, hear.) We are apt soon to forget facts when they are accomplished, and possibly to some of you it has not occurred what courage, what knowledge of events, what judgment, and what coolness were required in order to enable Mr. Goschen to carry out the financial change which many of his predecessors had desired to carry out, but which they never succeeded in accomplishing. The consequences to the finances of the country will remain a permanent tribute to Mr. Goschen's ability as a financier—(hear, hear)—and assuredly we, the Unionist party, have every reason to congratulate ourselves that it was in our tenure of office that that great financial reform was effected. With regard to Mr. Ritchie, his labours were often of a more arduous and more prolonged description. The whole difficulties of the Session, as far as the conduct of business was concerned, were due to the prodigious magnitude of the measure which Mr. Ritchie successfully carried through the House of Commons. However the work has been carried out; the pledges made over and over again by the party on the platform, at election after election, have been met and more than met; and we may safely say that we have laid deeply and strongly the foundations of the future government of localities in England, Scotland, and Wales. (Hear, hear.) I admit that there was one omission in the bill—not as it was originally introduced, but as it finally left the House of Commons. It was found necessary, as you are all aware, to drop the Licensing Clauses. I do not propose to go into the merits of the solution they afford to the contrary; but I think that nobody who conscientiously studies the question will deny that it was, at all events, a genuine solution, and that the opposition it met with on the part of the extreme Temperance party, and of others who are not supposed to belong to the Temperance party, has probably deferred for a long time—I won't say indefinitely—the settlement of the question, which, when it comes for settlement, will probably present to the Minister who has to settle it more formidable difficulties than have occurred at present to the mind of Sir William Harcourt. (Hear, hear.) With regard to the question of compensation, it has probably for the moment passed out of the sphere of practical politics. The question has, for the present at all events, lapsed: but I cannot believe that this country will ever consent to regard the property of, after all, an honourable and law-abiding class, as of a kind that can in equity be absolutely swept away without any species of compensation whatever. I do not profess to give any solution of that question, or to utter any opinion on it other than that which has been given by my colleagues; but if I am to understand Sir William Harcourt as throwing that principle to the winds, I certainly shall be greatly surprised if he will get an English House of Commons fully to assent to his views, or that he will be able, even with all his practice in the matter, to explain the inconsistency between his views as to what should be given in compensation to the publicans and what should be given in compensation to the agricultural tenants in Ireland. (Cheers.)

On the motion of Sir W. H. HOULDSWORTH, M.P., a hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Balfour for his visit and address, and, the chairman having been thanked for his services, the proceedings terminated.

Sir Michael Hicks-Beach opened a new Conservative club at Newton Abbot, Devonshire, yesterday, and afterwards delivered a political address. He said they had to deal in the future with great problems of reform, and it ought not to be difficult, with the aid of the Liberal Unionists, to defeat the machinations of their revolutionary foes. To do so they must work with the Liberal Unionists, they must act as they had acted, and as he was sure they would continue to act, with the same loyalty to the alliance as the Liberal Unionists had shown. They would be foolish indeed if they could think for a moment of sacrificing that alliance by not endeavouring, as far as they could, to act with their allies on matters of minor importance compared with those on which really their opinions were identical.

Yesterday afternoon a Liberal conference was held at Dumfries, at which Mr. A. L. Brown, M.P. for the Border Burghs, presided, and sixteen resolutions were adopted in favour of Home Rule, Disestablishment in England and Scotland, abolition of school fees, popular control over the liquor traffic, the one-man-one-vote principle, and other electoral reforms. In the evening a meeting of about 4,000 people was held in a marquee erected at the side of the River Nith, at which Mr. John Morley, M.P., was the principal speaker. The chair was taken by Mr. Reid, M.P. for Dumfries, who was supported by a number of members of Parliament and the local Liberal leaders. Among the letters of apology which were read was one from Mr. Gladstone and another from Lord Rosebery. Mr. Gladstone wrote: "Dear Sir—In Mr. Reid as your chairman, and Mr. Morley as your principal expositor of Liberal policy at your meeting, you have secured guarantees for its purposes which cannot be surpassed; and well as Liberal Scotland is able to think and judge for herself, they will assist her in forming a just estimate of the hopelessness of curing Ireland by the present system of coercion, and of the varied mischiefs which arise from this prolonged delay in the adoption of any measure which can ever pretend to be a settlement of the Irish question.—Your very faithful and obedient W. E. GLADSTONE." Lord Rosebery wrote: "You will, I doubt not, be able to show by the enthusiasm of your meeting how completely the Liberalism of Scotland has overcome the doubts and misgivings which so largely affected the issue in 1886. At the next election there will be no abstentions or half-hearts. Scotland cannot testify at present to a greater extent than she already has in by-elections to our resolute faith in our principles; but she awaits with anxiety the general election, which will enable her to give a dazzling and conclusive demonstration of her fidelity to Liberalism and its leader."

THE DEATH OF MAJOR BARTTELOT.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—Any Central African traveller reading your correspondent's account this morning of the way in which Major Barttelot met his death will understand the intense jealousy of the natives of any interference with their customs.

My own experience, with the exception that I escaped with my life, accords so entirely with the Major's that I may be excused in troubling you on the subject.

Some four years ago, whilst staying at Shaiga, one of the trading stations of the Royal Niger Company, situated about 500 miles up the Niger River, I was slowly recovering from a long bout of fever, and was unable for several nights to obtain any much-needed rest owing to the infernal noise of the tom-toms, or drums, the beating of which by night is a custom which at certain seasons extends throughout Central Africa.

After several ineffectual remonstrances with the chiefs or headmen, and half-maddened by the din of drums and mosquitoes, I one night allowed my temper to get the better of my discretion, and sallied forth in the direction of the hut from which the noise proceeded, and which was but a short distance outside the factory gates.

I succeeded in securing the drum, which a native allowed me to take from him without any resistance on his part, and I retraced my steps towards the factory. But my triumph was short-lived. Before I had got twenty yards I was overtaken and surrounded by a horde of howling savages, who, seizing the drum from my grasp, felled me to the ground and subjected me to all kinds of indignities.

When I was allowed to regain my feet, half-senseless, I perceived that the mob had been reinforced by several horsemen, who, on being informed by their comrades of the action I had taken with regard to the drum, gave vent to their feelings in howls of rage, and occupied themselves with backing their horses in my direction, and forcing me against the wall with their hindquarters.

At the expiration of half an hour, which seemed an age to me, I was allowed to depart, on promising to pay a fine of ten demijohns of rum, and I returned to my couch more dead than alive, with something more to keep me awake than drum-beating.

I attribute the fact of my escaping with my life to the wise precautions taken by the officials of the Royal Niger Company in prohibiting the sale of firearms in this district, as had any of the natives been armed with guns I consider that in their ungovernable fury I should inevitably have been shot.

I can only assume that Major Barttelot, probably greatly fatigued with his exertions in controlling a force of Manyemas, and deprived of his proper rest, allowed himself to be overcome by similar feelings to my own, and attempted that which in calmer moments he would not have dreamed of.—I am, Sir, yours faithfully,

EDWIN CLARE.

FOREIGNERS IN FRANCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—I have received several letters from English people habitually residing at St. Raphael during the winter, asking me what formalities were needed by the application of the decree of Oct. 2 for foreigners who come to reside at our station. I should be much obliged if you would accord the publicity of your honourable newspaper to inform your compatriots that this decree does not apply in any way to foreigners who come to spend the winter at St. Raphael. The English who spend the next season either in the hotels or in villas at St. Raphael or Valescure will not have to fulfil any formalities. I need scarcely add that they will continue to be welcomed with courtesy.—Please accept with many thanks the assurance of my distinguished esteem.

FELIX MARTIN, the Mayor of St. Raphael.

St. Raphael, Oct. 16.

WINTER AND THE POOR.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—At the near approach of winter weather may I beg a brief space to lay the needs of our large parish before the charitably-disposed among your readers? Lying on the verge of wealthier suburbs, we are yet an unendowed church, and with no fund for poor relief wherewith to meet the great needs of a large and very poor population. We have thousands of children, well nigh destitute, to whom a soup-kitchen, could we but start one, and penny dinners would be an inestimable boon, and who must otherwise go cold and empty through the long dreary months before us.—Trusting some kind hearts may be moved to send us the help so urgently needed, I am, Sir, yours faithfully,

ELLEN C. GREENE.

St. Mary's Vicarage, Stamford Brook,
Hammersmith, S.W.

APPLE AND PEAR CONFERENCE.

In the gardens of the Royal Horticultural Society at Chiswick, yesterday, the National Apple and Pear Conference, which, together with a fine show of fruit, has been in progress since Tuesday last, was brought to a close. Mr. Veitch presided over the discussion, which was conducted in the conservatory, and was largely attended. After an essay by Mr. E. T. Baillie (Chester) on the production and distribution of fruit, from a provincial point of view, Mr. W. E. Bear (Streatham) read a paper on the subject of compensation for orchard planting. In recent years, the latter gentleman explained, enough had been said to prove that it was desirable to grow more fruit, especially choice apples and pears, in this country; but the real question was how the thing should be done. In his judgment, if the people really desired to see orchard planting increased, they should call upon Parliament without delay to afford to every cultivator full security for the unexhausted value of any improvement he might effect. The paper, however, which excited paramount interest was one by Mr. D. Tallerman on "The Railway Difficulty, and how to deal with it." The author pointed out that this was a social problem of immense magnitude, and involving vast interests. There might be different opinions as to the causes of the present alarming condition of things; but nearly everybody admitted that the railway charges for carrying and the general arrangements for transmitting homegrown produce had rendered its cultivation absolutely unprofitable. Such a policy was both shortsighted and cruel. To counteract railway combination he suggested that local authorities should be enabled, by the passing of a general Act of Parliament, to provide open spaces for use as markets; to make connections with railways, so that produce might be run direct into them, and be disposed of without the owners incurring the cost of loading or unloading; and to construct auxiliary lines or tramways in connection with the railways, over which the authorities should have running powers. A market possessing such surroundings in each quarter of London would place the whole of the agriculturists of the kingdom into direct communication with consumers, would save several millions annually in cartage and delivery, and would bring a large quantity of nutritive food within reach of the working classes in better condition than they now received it.

A USEFUL HINT.—If British housekeepers, instead of purchasing the commonest of common matches, because they are low priced and thought to be cheap, would use none but matches bearing Bryant and May's name, they would not only get the best value for their money, but would enable Bryant and May to pay thousands of people more weekly in wages; and in that way the British housekeepers would be doing real good to the working classes of the East-end of London.—[ADVERTISEMENT.]

A CHOICE OF TOYS FOR NOTHING.—"In buying toys recently I was much perplexed and exercised in my mind how I should please my little expectant friends until I happily became the possessor of one of Hinde's Gratis Picture Toy Books, a brilliantly illustrated quarto of 12 pages. These charming little books are presented by Messrs. Hinde without charge, and besides being of great service in helping to solve the momentous question of buying the right toy, the book is an amusing toy in itself, and will be much appreciated by little folks." These Gratis Toy Books are published and distributed to all families who apply by Messrs. Hinde, the Patent Toy Makers, at their London Sample Room, 1a, City-road, E.C. If you wish to make a present to a little boy or girl, be sure to obtain one of these pretty books. It will cost you nothing.—[ADVERTISEMENT.]

The police authorities were engaged yesterday in making inquiries with respect to the mysterious parcel received by Mr. Lusk, the chairman of the Whitechapel Vigilance Committee. The portion of kidney which it contained has been submitted to Dr. Gordon Browne, the surgeon to the City Police, for microscopical examination, and upon his report will in large measure depend the further steps that may be taken. It may be remembered that it was Dr. Gordon Browne who gave evidence at the Mitre-square inquest with reference to the organs missing from the body of the woman Eddowes. He then intimated that only the right kidney could be found, and that now submitted to him is a portion of a left kidney, the suggestion being that it forms part of that which was taken away. It is stated, however, that on this point no definite opinion can be pronounced, as these organs vary considerably in the same person, and conclusions based on the condition of the right kidney may very well prove misleading. On the other hand, it is asserted that only a small portion of the renal artery adheres to the kidney, while in the case of the Mitre-square victim a large portion of this artery adhered to the body. It may be mentioned that Dr. Openshaw, of the Pathological Museum attached to the London Hospital, confirms the statement that in his view the article enclosed in the parcel addressed to Mr. Lusk is a portion of a human organ, and not of any animal, as has been suggested by those who regard the whole affair as a hoax. Meantime, while the City police are having a careful examination made of the contents, the authorities at Scotland-yard are giving attention to the wrapper of the parcel, with a view of ascertaining where it was posted. The box, it appears, was enclosed in brown paper, and the postmark upon it is consequently not very legible. Practically only the letters "ond" can be deciphered, but they are considered sufficient to justify the belief that the parcel was posted in some part of London. The Post Office officials have been appealed to with a view of obtaining their assistance in the matter, and in their opinion the missive was posted either in the Eastern or the East Central district. There is only one postmark on the package, which suggests that it was despatched from the district in which it was received, which would be the Eastern district. Letters and packages travelling from one district to another usually bear the postmark of both. On the other hand the package was too large to have been dropped into the ordinary post-box, and would seem likely to have been despatched from Lombard-street or Gracechurch-street Post-office, where the receptacles are of unusually wide dimensions. The package in question bore two penny stamps, and was posted in the ordinary way. Had it been sent by parcel post the place of despatch would have been traceable, while it is possible that some of the officials might have remembered the sender. With regard to the caligraphy of the letter, and of the postcard which Mr. Lusk previously received, there is little doubt that they are in the same handwriting. They differ in every respect from the communications of "Jack the Ripper," except, perhaps, in the use of the word "boss."

A statement which apparently gives a clue to the sender of the strange package received by Mr. Lusk was made last night by Miss Emily Marsh, whose father carries on business in the leather trade at 218, Jubilee-street, Mile-end-road. In Mr. Marsh's absence Miss Marsh was in the front shop, shortly after one o'clock on Monday last, when a stranger, dressed in clerical costume, entered, and, referring to the reward bill in the window, asked for the address of Mr. Lusk, described therein as the president of the Vigilance Committee. Miss Marsh at once referred the man to Mr. J. Aarons, the treasurer of the committee, who resides at the corner of Jubilee-street and Mile-end-road, a distance of about thirty yards. The man, however, said he did not wish to go there, and Miss Marsh thereupon produced a newspaper in which Mr. Lusk's address was given as Alderney-road, Globe-road, no number being mentioned. She requested the stranger to read the address, but he declined, saying, "Read it out," and proceeded to write something in his pocket-book, keeping his head down meanwhile. He subsequently left the shop, after thanking the young lady for the information, but not before Miss Marsh, alarmed by the man's appearance, had sent the shop-boy, John Cormack, to see that all was right. This lad, as well as Miss Marsh, give a full description of the man, while Mr. Marsh, who happened to come along at the time, also encountered him on the pavement outside. The stranger is described as a man of some forty-five years of age, fully six feet in height, and slimly built. He wore a soft felt black hat, drawn over his forehead, a stand-up collar, and a very long black single-breasted overcoat, with a Prussian or clerical collar partly turned up. His face was of a sallow type, and he had a dark beard and moustache. The man spoke with what was taken to be an Irish accent. No importance was attached to the incident until Miss Marsh read of the receipt by Mr. Lusk of a strange parcel, and then it occurred to her that the stranger might be the person who had despatched it. His inquiry was made at one o'clock on Monday afternoon, and Mr. Lusk received the package at eight p.m. the next day. The address on the package curiously enough gives no number in Alderney-road, a piece of information which Miss Marsh could not supply. It appears that on leaving the shop the man went right by Mr. Aaron's house, but did not call. Mr. Lusk has been informed of the circumstances, and states that no person answering the description has called on him, nor does he know any one at all like the man in question.

GREAT FIRE IN THE CITY.

A conflagration broke out last night in the very heart of the City which caused the destruction of a vast amount of valuable property, and at one time threatened to rival in its extent the great fire in Wood-street several years ago. Three buildings, the principal of them occupied by Thomas Adams and Co., Nottingham lace manufacturers, and Messrs. Blenkinsopp and Co., printers, were gutted, what escaped from the flames being irretrievably damaged by water. The property is bounded on the west by Bow-lane, on the south by Watling-street, on the east by Queen-street, and on the north by Cheapside, and is crossed by a narrow lane called Well-court, running from Bow-lane to Queen-street. In this court a number of firms have places of business more or less extensive, and many of them have suffered considerable damage. The warehouse of Thomas Adams and Co. and Messrs. Bachtold and Co., embroidery and lace manufacturers, has its frontage in Bow-lane, and extends a considerable way backwards, the building in the rear being contiguous to the Watling-street station of the Metropolitan Fire Brigade. It was from this station that the fire was first observed about eight o'clock. One of the firemen on duty heard a great crash, and rushing to the window, he observed the flames already shooting up through the roof of the warehouse. In a moment every man in the station was at work, and telegrams were despatched in all directions for assistance. All the streets in the neighbourhood are very narrow, and the firemen had some difficulty in getting full play upon the flames, which seemed to have broken out in the centre of the premises. Very soon the sky was crimsoned, and the wind from the east drove myriads of sparks upon the houses and shops between Bow-lane and St. Paul's, causing many fears lest they should alight upon some inflammable material and cause fresh conflagrations. The spectacle of the great dome of St. Paul's, the spire of Bow Church, and the towers of St. Mary, Aldermanbury lit up by the flames, brought thousands of spectators from all parts of London, who crowded Cheapside and Cannon-street, and would have blocked Bow-lane also, but for the admirable promptitude with which City constables were concentrated on the spot from outlying beats, and set to work to clear the space necessary to allow the firemen free scope. Very soon fifteen steamers were at work under the direction of Captain Shaw himself, and of Mr. Hutchings, of Farringdon-road, and their efforts were principally devoted to preventing the flames from spreading beyond the limits of Well-court. In addition to Thomas Adams and Co., among the firms who have places of business there are Messrs. Henry Tucker and Co., silk spinners; Messrs. Bachtold and Co., manufacturers of embroideries; Mr. Joseph Whitaker, merchant; Mr. J. W. Swindley, manufacturers' agent; and Messrs. Fenton and Co., wholesale mantle manufacturers. As far as can be made out from the inspection of Captain Shaw, the fire originated—through what cause is unknown—at the back part of the warehouse, in the part occupied by Bachtold and Co., and as all the material stored there, as well as in the floors in the occupation of Thomas Adams and Co., is of the most inflammable material, the fire spread from floor to floor with amazing rapidity, blinding the firemen and compelling them to work under the greatest disadvantage. Well-court is extremely narrow, and the flames shot out so strongly that they soon ignited the workshops on the north side owned by Messrs. Blenkinsopp and Co., printers, and involved the destruction of part of them. Considerable damage was also caused to the Albion Coffee Tavern, which adjoins Messrs. Blenkinsopp's premises, and also several small shops at the rear of Thomas Adams and Co.'s warehouse. It looked at one time as if the fire would spread as far as Cheapside, and it was solely owing to the magnificent work of the firemen—one of whom unfortunately was seriously injured in the discharge of his duties and had to be taken to St. Bartholomew's Hospital—that this calamity was averted. The hose was run through Well-court and drawn up by ropes to the top of the buildings, whence the brass-helmeted men could be discerned through the clouds of smoke steadily pouring water upon the flames. Steamer after steamer was set to work the instant after it arrived on the scene, and at nine o'clock a very large force of engines and hydrants was engaged. For two hours the battle was kept up, but about ten o'clock the firemen were triumphant, and all danger of the flames spreading was at an end. The man who was injured is named W. Donovan. While he was busy pouring water on the flames a partition wall, and some heavy beams, fell upon him. His companions at great risk rescued him from his danger, and conveyed him to St. Bartholomew's Hospital. Altogether there were 120 firemen engaged at the fire. The principal sufferers by the conflagration are Thomas Adams and Co., Messrs. Blenkinsopp, and Messrs. Fenton and Co., but nearly all the premises in Well-court are damaged more or less. The extent of the destruction caused cannot yet be accurately ascertained, but it is roughly put down as between £30,000 and £40,000. The printing premises, plant, and machinery of the Financial Critic were also damaged.

The Cross at Charing. View of Westminster Abbey and Holbein's Gate. The Trained Bands. Enrolling the Volunteers. For Hearth and Home.—TO-DAY, at 1.30.

THE ARMADA.—The Game of Bowls on Plymouth Hoe. Realisation of the Picture by Seymour Lucas, A.R.A., under his direct supervision, and by the special permission of the Publisher. The Foe's in Sight.—TO-DAY, at 1.30.

THE ARMADA.—The Council of War Aboard the Admiral's Ship. The Fight off Calais. The Fireships. The Defeat of the Armada. The Spanish Inquisition. The Auto da Fe. The Rescue. Whitehall. A Royal Reward. The Thanksgiving at St. Paul's. Elizabeth's Triumphal Progress. God Save the Queen. God Save You, My People.—TO-DAY, at 1.30.

THE ARMADA.—The unanimous praise bestowed upon this historical drama and grand spectacle by the leading press of the country is mightily endorsed by the crowded audiences which fill Drury-lane Theatre at each performance.

THE ARMADA.—Times says: "A great success was achieved, and the fame of the theatre as the home of spectacular displays cannot fail to be increased by this latest addition to their number. Nor does the production lack merit in other directions. The authors of 'The Armada,' inspired by the thoughts which the tercentenary of the great naval conflict suggests, have set themselves to write a play which shall be fresh and interesting, and shall not depend exclusively for success upon mere scenic effect. The times and events which they have chosen for reproduction on the stage are among the most stirring in the whole annals of British history; they supply abundant opportunities for appealing to the patriotic sentiment, and they bristle with romantic and picturesque incident."

THE ARMADA.—Times says: "The great naval display, which can be called no less than a triumph of stage artifice, was received on Saturday with shouts of applause, and if it stood alone would be sufficient to attract the public for many a day. At the fall of the curtain there was loud and prolonged applause."—TO-DAY, at 1.30.

THE ARMADA.—Daily Telegraph says: "In a scene of intense excitement Mr. Augustus Harris on Saturday night succeeded in launching one of the mightiest, most showy, and costly vessels that have ever been built in the dramatic docks of Drury-lane. The sea-fight between the Armada and the English men-of-war off Calais may be pronounced the most effective historical picture ever realised on the modern stage. The murky gloom of the atmosphere, the lurid light thrown on the opposing vessels, the ceaseless fusillade of firing, the shouting and cheering of the sailors, the marvellous moving of the vessels to give the enemy a broadside, make up a scene so novel and impressive that it will not readily be forgotten. This Armada fight, in its design, its daring, and its execution, will be quoted as one of the boldest achievements ever attempted on the Drury-lane stage. This scene alone will attract all London."—TO-DAY, at 1.30.

THE ARMADA.—Daily Telegraph says: "In his pictures of the Inquisition Mr. Harris has been careful not to give offence. All was done in scrupulous good taste. In the Rouen scene once more we beheld a triumph of stage management and a brilliant flash of colour. It is a scene that will linger on the memory. Queen Elizabeth has to pass, under a baldachino, to Old St. Paul's, to make thanksgiving for the safety of her country. It is a procession of accurate costume, and those who would understand what Elizabeth's reign was like so far as it outwardly appeared can see it here. The old cathedral dedicated to St. Paul, the Cross, and the citizens appear here just as they were three centuries ago. This will be a picture that will be appreciated alike by the student and the sight-seer. 'The Armada' is one of the most distinctly creditable things that Mr. Harris has ever done. 'The Armada' is a noteworthy advance on anything that has been recently attempted in giving artistic and thoughtful work to a popular stage. Such enterprises must succeed."

THE ARMADA.—Daily News says: "The authors of 'The Armada' have drunk deep of the sentiment of the most stirring and the most truly national episode of our annals. The story undoubtedly interested and amused the spectators. The dialogue is exceptionally good. The great battle off Calais is the most striking feature and the scenic climax of the play. The characteristics of the fight, with the huge Spanish and Portuguese galleons and galleasses looming large in the glare of the fire-ships, and exchanging broadsides with the English ships, amidst the crash of falling spars and the cheers and boardings of the English sailors, were happily portrayed, and were all very stirring and rich in picture. Next to this for breadth and massive effect was the crowded yet well composed scene of the auto-da-fe in the grand square of Cadiz, and the imposing closing spectacle of the Queen's triumphal entry into Old St. Paul's. 'The Armada' may safely be assumed to be launched upon a long and prosperous career."

THE ARMADA.—Morning Post says: "In 'The Armada' Messrs. Henry Hamilton and Augustus Harris have hit upon a happy idea that will bring substantial reward to them, and will at the same time supply for months to come a great deal of enjoyment for the playgoing public. We may heartily congratulate the authors on the work they have done. As a drama there will be found an ample store of interest and excitement, pathos and humour, while nothing has ever been presented at Drury-lane Theatre to equal 'The Armada' as a spectacle. All the resources of scenic and mechanical art have been employed to give these scenes reality and picturesque effect. They not only delight the eye, but they are interesting as a record of heroic days. A stirring appeal is made to the patriotism of the playgoer, while success is further assured by the unbounded liberality of the management in placing the drama upon the stage. The exciting events on the English coast are varied and contrasted with vivid incidents in Spain, all the details of which are carried out in the most realistic manner, displaying the skill and artistic taste of the manager to the greatest advantage."—TO-DAY, at 1.30.

THE ARMADA.—Morning Post says: "It is the fight off Calais that most excites the audience. Nothing like this nautical spectacle has ever been attempted before, and the exciting and realistic effects were greeted with deafening cheers. Warm commendation may be given to the principal members of the company. When the curtain fell Messrs. Harris and Hamilton were twice called to the front, and a speech was requested from the manager, who, however, contented himself with the simple question, 'Is the play a success?' The shout of applause that followed was the gratifying response to the managerial query, and we may therefore anticipate that 'The Armada' will keep its place in the Drury-lane bill till Christmas at least. The drama has all the elements of a popular piece. All these considerations, combined with the emphatic verdict of approval given by the crowded audience, lead us to predict with confidence the permanent popularity of the new Drury-lane drama."

THE ARMADA.—In consequence of the great success of "The Armada," and in response to numerous requests, another MATINEE will be given THIS DAY (Saturday), at 1.30.

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—TO-NIGHT, at 7.45.

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—Mr. Rutland Barrington, Sole Lessee.—THIS EVENING, at 8.30, THE DEAN'S DAUGHTER, a new play, in four acts, by Sydney Grundy and F. C. Philips. At 7.45, A PATRON SAINT, comedy in one act, by Glanville Thomas. For cast see under clock. The orchestra under the direction of Mr. Carl Armbruster. Doors open at 7.30. Box-office (Mr. G. Reid) open daily from ten to five.

THE DEAN'S DAUGHTER, TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.

MR. RUTLAND BARRINGTON as THE DEAN.

THE TIMES says: "Mr. Rutland Barrington begins well; maintaining the best traditions of the house in point of business organisation, he displays the no less valuable qualities of courage and enterprise in the selection of his programme. No newly-mouthed adaptation from the French is put forth at the St. James's as an abstract and brief chronicle of English life. 'The Dean's Daughter' is the product of English brains, breathing in every line an English spirit."

THE DAILY NEWS says: "Mr. Barrington has recruited a strong company; more important still, he has bestowed on the whole performance a degree of care and attention which was rewarded by a representation exhibiting all the smoothness and precision of a play that has been performed many times. Such qualities as these go far to explain the triumph of authors and management on Saturday evening, for triumph it was."

MISS OLGA NETHERSOLE as THE DEAN'S DAUGHTER.

THE TIMES says: "The title-part is entrusted to Miss Olga Nethersole, a young actress who has risen, almost at a bound, to a conspicuous place in her profession."

THE WORLD says: "Miss Olga Nethersole, after playing gracefully, sympathetically, movingly throughout, put the crown to a really beautiful performance by the cry of mingled astonishment and rapture with which she rushed to the arms of her lover she believed to be dead."

ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.—THE DEAN'S DAUGHTER.

THE DAILY TELEGRAPH says: "The play is admirably mounted, and throughout the evening the audience showed a courtesy and genial consideration for those engaged on a nervous duty that marks a new era in the history of celebrated first nights."

SPECIAL MATINEE of THE DEAN'S DAUGHTER, SATURDAY NEXT, Oct. 27, at 2.30. Doors open at two o'clock.—ST. JAMES'S THEATRE.

GLOBE.—THE MONK'S ROOM, by John Lart, TO-NIGHT, at 8.15. For cast see under clock.—Lessee, Mr. John Lart. Doors open 7.45.

THE MONK'S ROOM.—Mr. E. S. WILLARD.—Sporting Times: "Its story is strong and interesting. Everybody follows the development of the plot with great keenness, and at the close pent-up feelings find relief in hearty applause."

GLOBE.—THE MONK'S ROOM.—Morning Post: "The attention of the audience was kept from first to last." Illustrated London News: "A better acted play is not to be found in London."

THE MONK'S ROOM.—Miss ALMA MURRAY.—The Daily Telegraph: "'The Monk's Room' should be seen by all who appreciate good acting." Piccadilly: "One of the most striking and effective plays seen of late years."

GLOBE.—THE MONK'S ROOM.—Topical Times: "A terse, virile drama, with a strong and interesting plot, effective situations, a powerful love interest, and a startling and dramatic climax. It will fill the Globe for many weeks."

THE MONK'S ROOM.—Mr. HERMANN VEZIN.—Lloyd's: "The ghostly incident is admirably contrived, and is very impressive." Army and Navy Gazette: "A play of strong interest and great literary merit, very cleverly acted."

GLOBE THEATRE.—THE MONK'S ROOM, a new romantic play, of modern interest, in a prologue and three acts, by John Lart, TO-NIGHT, at 8.15.—Box-office open daily ten to five.—Business Manager, Mr. Gilbert Tate.

VAUDEVILLE.—Mr. Thomas Thorne, Sole Lessee and Manager.—THIS EVENING, at 8.30, the successful comedy, JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART (180th time), by Robert Buchanan. Mr. Thomas Thorne and original company. At 7.45, an original one act play, by H. Byatt, entitled THE BROTHERS. For full cast see under clock.—Box-office open ten to 5.30.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—180th Time.—Mr. THOMAS THORNE as PARSON ADAMS.—The Times says: "The character of Parson Adams, one of the best known in the whole range of the eighteenth century fiction, is so closely interwoven with the action, and so admirably embodied by Thomas Thorne, as to be the most prominent of all. The quaint figure of the rustic, simple-minded cleric, who is 'passing rich on something less than £40 a year,' is met with at every turn, and one of the prettiest scenes of the piece is a representation of his humble cottage, with a glimpse of its domestic life. Parson Adams preaches peace, but the ways of the world cause him to brandish menacingly at frequent intervals the stout knotted stick that he always carries. This character is one of Mr. Thorne's most delightful creations. The habit of the pulpit is strong upon the venerable divine, but under his clerical manner human nature peeps forth with the most refreshing effect."—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30. Great Success.—VAUDEVILLE.

JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART.—180th Time.—Mr. THOMAS THORNE as PARSON ADAMS.—The Daily Telegraph says: "We have to congratulate Mr. Thorne, not only on the good taste he has bestowed on this memorable production, but on his personation of dear old Parson Adams, which will considerably exalt him as an actor of tenderness and humour in the eyes of the public he has served so well, and we shall return with sincere pleasure to the greater detail and analysis of a work which may claim a place in stage literature as one of the best plays of the kind produced since 'Olivia' and 'Sophia.'"—TO-NIGHT, at 8.30.—Great Success.—VAUDEVILLE.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—MATINEES of JOSEPH'S SWEETHEART will be resumed TO-DAY (Saturday), Oct. 20, at 2.30.—VAUDEVILLE THEATRE.

PROSPECTUS.

The Bank of New Zealand is prepared to receive applications on the form annexed to the prospectus for 25,000 shares of £10 each of the company upon the London register at a premium of £1 per share, payable as follows:

£1 per share on application.
3 " " on allotment (including the £1 premium).
3 " " on the 17th November, 1888.
4 " " on the 17th January, 1889.
£11

The shares will rank for dividend rateably with the present capital of the company, on the amount of the calls as paid.

Applications are invited from the general public, but those from existing shareholders will be primarily and favourably considered, and a similar amount of 25,000 shares will be offered to the shareholders and the public in the colonies.

The bank is a colonial institution, and has been established for 27 years, its board of management being at Auckland, New Zealand. It has branches throughout New Zealand, in the Australian Colonies, and in London. It possesses a large commercial and very profitable business. It transacts the financial business of the New Zealand Government, and, with other banking institutions, participates in the banking business of some of the Australian Governments, and also has a large connection with the municipal boards and other public institutions of the colonies.

As has already been communicated to the public press, an influential and independent committee of shareholders in New Zealand was appointed in April last to investigate the affairs of the bank.

As a result of an exhaustive inquiry they presented a report showing that the bank had made serious and exceptional losses, owing to the great depression in New Zealand, and to other causes.

This report was presented at a shareholders' meeting held at Auckland on the 3rd inst. A deputation from the above-named committee, the Hon. W. W. Johnston, of Wellington, and Mr. A. G. Horton, J.P., of Auckland, are now in London, and, by telegraphic summary of the report which they have received, they have been informed that to make full provision for the bank's losses the whole reserve fund and £3 per share should be written off the old capital, and the necessary resolutions have been passed for carrying this into effect.

It is also contemplated hereafter to give the existing shareholders an option of paying up again the £3 per share so written off, thus bringing the paid up amount on the old shares to £10, and assimilating the two classes of shares.

The provision made for past losses, in pursuance of the committee's recommendation, and the bank's great earning power, gives strong promise that steady dividends will be maintained upon the remodelled capital. Of the present new home issue four-fifths have been already assured, and from telegrams received from the Colonies it is confidently believed that the whole of the Colonial issue will be readily absorbed.

Deposits will be returned in full in cases where no allotment is made.

Copies of the deed of settlement and of the acts of the general assembly incorporating the proprietors, may be inspected at the offices of the bank. Prospectuses with forms of application can be obtained there, or from the brokers of the bank, Messrs. Steer, Lawford, and Co., 5, Draper's-gardens, E.C.

Application will be made in due course for a quotation of the shares of this issue on the London Stock Exchange.

"20, Lorne-road, and 24, Hamilton-square, Birkenhead, Sept. 21, 1888.

"Gentlemen—I desire, in view of certain statements made by another firm, to express to you how highly pleased I am with your preparation of Meat and Wine. I have over and over again witnessed its effects with my patients, for whom I always order it. In many cases it has acted like a charm, and in a way that ordinary wine (I mean wine without meat) could not do. Not only so, but I use it myself when I feel low or wearied by over work, and I never know it fail.—I remain, Gentlemen, yours sincerely, T. Reginald Jones, M.R.C.S., L.L.M., K.Q.C.P.I., &c."

FOR THE BLOOD IS THE LIFE.

CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE.

CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE.

The Blood being the source from which our systems are built up, and from which we derive our mental as well as physical capabilities, it is important that it should be kept pure. If it contain vile festering poisons all organic functions are weakened thereby, and settling upon important organs, such as the lungs, liver, or kidneys, the effect is most disastrous. Hence it behoves everyone to keep their blood in a perfectly healthy condition. No matter what the symptoms may be, the real cause of a large proportion of all diseases is bad blood.

CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE.

CLARKE'S WORLD-FAMED BLOOD MIXTURE is not recommended to cure every disease; on the contrary, there are many that it will not cure; but it is a guaranteed Cure for all Blood Diseases. It is the most searching Blood Cleanser yet discovered, and it will free the system from all known blood poisons, be they animal, vegetable, or mineral. It is warranted to cure the worst forms of Skin Diseases, Eczema, Blotches, Pimples, and Eruptions, also Glandular Swellings, Scrofulous and Ulcerated Sores, Diseases of the Bones, White Swellings, Fever Sores, Hip Joint and Spinal Diseases. LONDON, SATURDAY, OCTOBER 20.

Yesterday afternoon the Emperor William took his departure from Rome. His Majesty is expected in Potsdam to-morrow morning. Our special correspondent is assured that his Majesty returns to Berlin with a far higher opinion of the value of the Italian alliance than that which he entertained previously to his sojourn in Rome.

M. Clémenceau delivered an address to a meeting of the Extreme Left yesterday, in Paris, strongly supporting the Revision Bill. M. Floquet gave evidence on the same subject before the Committee of the Chamber, and formally declared against the election of a Constituent Assembly.

The Prince of Wales yesterday paid a visit to the laboratory of M. Pasteur, at Paris.

An Arab slave dhow has been captured on the East Coast of Africa by the steam launch of a British gunboat. Lieutenant Cooper was killed by the fire from the dhow.

Lord Hartington was present at a public meeting of the Ulster Liberal Unionists in Belfast last night, and in acknowledging a resolution of welcome pointed out that recent Nationalist speeches contained abundant evidence of the impossibility of keeping the Irish demands within the limits laid down by Mr. Gladstone. The real struggle was still for legislative independence; and before any extreme panacea such as Home Rule could be entertained a fair trial should be given to the attempt, which the Government were willing to make, to develope the industrial resources of Ireland.

Mr. Balfour was entertained at luncheon, yesterday, by the members of the Manchester Carlton Club, and, responding to the toast of his health, referred to the legislative measures passed by the Government during the past year, particularly dwelling on the great financial triumph achieved by Mr. Goschen and Mr. Ritchie's Local Government Act.

In the course of the closing discussions at the National Apple and Pear Conference at Chiswick, yesterday, it was suggested that the cultivation of fruit in this country should be encouraged by giving growers a legislative guarantee for compensation for unexhausted improvements in orchards, and that the local authorities should be invested with running powers over the railways from the fruit districts to the urban markets.

Meetings of the Coalowners' Associations of North Wales and West Lancashire, held respectively at Chester and Liverpool, yesterday, decided to grant the advance of 10 per cent. in wages demanded by the workmen.

Last night a destructive fire occurred in Well-court, in the heart of the City. The warehouses and offices of several large firms were gutted, and damage was done to the amount of about £40,000. A fireman was seriously injured by a wall falling on him. It was mainly owing to the determined efforts of Captain Shaw and the men under him that the conflagration did not attain much larger proportions.

Henry Glennie was committed for trial from the Clerkenwell Police-court, yesterday, on the charge of being concerned in the wilful murder of Mrs. Wright, at Canonbury, in May last. A witness named Phœbe Field, who had recently lived with the accused, detailed a confession which she alleged the man had made to her, in which he declared that he killed the deceased by a blow on the head, a companion, styled Long Bob, stealing the money. Glennie further informed her that he and his accomplices had been told to go to Mrs. Wright's by a girl formerly in her service.

At the Stock Exchange the tendency was irregular, upon rumours of important gold movements. Foreign Government bonds, especially Argentine and Buenos Ayres, were lower, and several of the home railways declined. American, Canadian, and Mexican lines, however, were in request, at higher prices. Copper and Transvaal gold shares improved. Consols receded ⅛ per cent.

A MATTER of high national and historical interest is about to be brought forward for discussion, and will be set before the public in time to prepare opinion for a special appeal to Parliament. The Mother-Island has outgrown her Walhalla. The supply of ancient and modern worthies which her exhaustless bosom bears has outrun the receptacle for their honoured dust—in a word, Westminster Abbey is full to positive repletion with the mortal remains of remote and recent heroes and great men, and some other central resting-place must be found, or formed, if the Minster and its vicinity are still to be the central "GOD'S ACRE" of this country, the sleeping-place of our noblest and most famous dead. Who is there that would dispute the vast and commanding influence which the Abbey as a national mausoleum of the most illustrious of Englishmen has played in the annals of these islands? It is not merely that many a great soldier or sailor in bygone days of battle has exclaimed to himself like NELSON in the hour of crisis, "Victory or Westminster Abbey!" Our peerless sea-chief was after all never buried there, and many another good and gifted son of Britain rests in those sacred shadows who never expected, nor, perhaps, desired the distinction. Yet, apart from those who in all ranks and vocations of life have won by more or less conspicuous deserts the supreme tribute of interment with our Kings and Queens, our poets and warriors, our statesmen, musicians, discoverers, and philosophers, the aspect and majesty of the Minster have been from generation to generation in England a profound and silent lesson to each age. Many and many an unrecorded career has been the better completed, many and many a bold deed or lofty enterprise the more gladly undertaken, because of the unspoken teachings of those solemn tombs and those celebrated names. If such lessons are strong and dominating in all spots where great men have been laid to their eternal repose—in Santa Croce, at the Campo Santo of Pisa, amid the graves of Père La Chaise, or even in the grass-grown mounds of our country churchyards—what must not be their eloquence and impressiveness in a place like the Abbey, where the history of our race is written in epitaphs and monuments? No country in the world possesses, in truth, such a grand and perfect illustration of its chronicle, blazoned by such a galaxy of illustrious sons and daughters. For six or seven centuries past Britain has kept the tally of her growth and recorded her own glories within those antique walls, by adding with loving hands age after age and reign by reign more and more of her most precious dust to that which already consecrated the immeasurably hallowed soil of her central Abbey. Who is there that would be willing to see the continuity of these most honourable Fasti broken? Who does not feel assured that the Empire will still need noble and heroic hearts, gifted and well-deserving sons, servants of the State as faithful and fearless as those whose names dignify every corner of the Minster? And who would not ardently desire that where the nation has laid its best and worthiest she may continue to deposit the honoured remains of those their successors, so that present and future times may add their achievements to the past, and the ancient Minster remain what it has so long been, the central shrine of our Imperial story—the silent and ever-suggestive chronicle in marble—by effigy, tablet, bust, and epitaph—of those who have been among the best of their land, and brought it lustre and fame?

Yet, if Westminster Abbey is still to remain the Walhalla of British worthies, something must be done, and quickly done. The ancient fane is full of the ashes of our best and greatest to its very doors. It is a matter of impossibility to arrange for more than twenty or thirty additional interments within its precincts. There is actually room remaining for only three supplementary statues—one of which might perhaps be placed in the northern transept, and another near the west door as a pendant to that of the good Earl of SHAFTESBURY'S. Two busts at most could find a niche in addition to those which have been located in all sorts of out-of-the-way corners. The late W. E. FORSTER'S memorial, recently erected, has had to be put almost out of sight in the northern ambulatory; and the effigy of the late Mr. FAWCETT in the baptistery occupies a recess so dark that the merits of the work as a piece of sculpture are entirely lost. The bust of our last dead poet, MATTHEW ARNOLD, for the reception of which preparation is making, must be contented with a resting-place far less prominent than his many friends and admirers could wish. There is no longer room even for tablets and cenotaphs, as in the case of Lord SHAFTESBURY, whose relics do not lie in the Abbey. In a word, this little island has been so prolific of heroes and famous men that she has filled to well-nigh the very last tomb-space the vast area of the Minster, notwithstanding so many illustrious dead have either been laid to their repose in St. Paul's or in local cathedrals, churches, and graveyards. True, there is one resource: we might go through the long and varied catalogue of that great company of dead sleeping in the Abbey, and find some—perhaps many—whose monuments are neither ornamental nor becoming, nor always well-deserved. A certain weeding process of grotesque or inartistic memorials bearing names ill fitted to the solemn and majestic society of the spot might take place, and this would give additional elbow-room for the departing celebrities of perchance the present generation. But who would like to undertake the intensely invidious task of making such a selection? How many heart-burnings it would cause; into what vexed questions it might drag the authorities of the Minster, and what an ill example it would seem to give for disturbing the peace of the grave, once obtained! Briefly, there is no remedy for the difficulty which stares us in the face, short of the enlargement of the area of the sacred ground. The accommodation of that hallowed shrine must be increased. The breed of heroes in England not being by any means, apparently, extinguished; nor the need of them for all our sakes lessened; nor the love and reverence for their memory grown colder, we must have a bigger Abbey, or at least more space in the curtilages and precincts of that which exists: and this idea, therefore, it is which we are about to see put forward prominently by the initiative of the authorities of the Minster, and openly discussed, with a view to an appeal to Parliament, and some prompt and practical action.

The idea likely to be promulgated is to revive in a modified form the scheme of the late Prince Consort, which involved the demolition of Abingdon-street, so as to open up to view the old Jewel House at the rear, thus gaining new ground for a Cloister, a Campo Santo, or some special supplementary building. This would indirectly much improve the western approach to the Houses of Parliament, and even if only some seven or eight houses fronting Poets' Corner were acquired and razed to the ground there would be a large and closely-neighbouring plot thus cleared which might be linked directly to the Abbey by a covered way and turned into an annexe for interments and memorials. The project brought forward will probably recommend the smaller and less expensive design, and will suggest that a "Victorian Chapel" should be reared upon the area so gained. The architecture of this building would be in keeping with that of the ancient and imposing surroundings near at hand, since it must be worthy of its office as a chapel-of-ease to the majestic Minster, for its congregation of famous dead; and both the building itself and the cloister or gallery connecting it with Poets' Corner would then afford indefinite new room for those whom the nation will wish to see honoured by a public funeral. The enterprise must be Parliamentary and national, for the simple reason that the Dean and Chapter possess no funds whatever for such an object. It is explained, in the deeply-interesting communication which we have received, and publish this morning, that the Ecclesiastical Commissioners administer the revenues of the Abbey, which barely suffice for the sustentation of the edifice and the emoluments of the clergy serving it. Indeed, the Dean and Chapter will incur some losses and drawbacks if the scheme finds favour and is carried into execution; but they are eager, in a most praiseworthy spirit, and upon public grounds, to see the general opinion of the country support the proposal. The "Victorian Chapel" which is thus to supplement the Abbey, might be either ecclesiastical or nationalised, and its control might be vested either in the representatives of Parliament or in the existing Chapter of Westminster. If erected at all, however, it must be erected in a manner befitting its high and solemn dedication, and we are glad by these words to pave the way for what—if we mistake not—the patriotism and religious sentiment of the community will very warmly welcome and adopt.

WE have learnt with a surprise which the public, we believe, will share, that the county magistracy in at least one English district are applying methods of punishment to juvenile offenders which we had supposed to have passed long ago into well-merited disuse. A day or two ago, at the current Quarter Sessions of the North Riding of Yorkshire, Mr. HUTTON called attention, on the Report of the Prison Visiting Committee, to the subject of juvenile delinquency, and said that very few magistrates seemed to be aware of the extent to which young persons were punished by imprisonment. And assuredly, if magistrates are aware of it, the public at large will be unprepared for the revelation contained in the extremely painful statistics laid by Mr. HUTTON before the Court. During the year ending the 30th of September no fewer, it seems, than forty boys and girls of sixteen years of age and under were committed to Northallerton Prison for various terms. Of those forty children he had ascertained that twenty per cent. had been in prison before, thus proving the contaminating effects of the punishment in the former instance, and raising, we may add, the melancholy presumption that a fifth part of the remaining eighty per cent. of first imprisonments will be followed in like manner by a second committal to gaol. Even if the offences in respect of which these sentences were passed had been serious ones, the mode of correction would remain gravely questionable; but, as a matter of fact, they were many, if not most of them, misdeeds of an utterly trivial character. Among those sent to prison for fourteen days was one little boy of fourteen who had stolen a shirt. Another, a boy of fifteen, was imprisoned for this term—though with the "option of a fine," which of course he could not pay—for sleeping in the open air. Yet another lad, a year older, got his fortnight for stealing bottles; while an unhappy urchin of thirteen was actually compelled to undergo this punishment in expiation of the heinous offence of "playing at pitch-and-toss." The case of the infant poacher who was convicted, with his father, of an offence against the Game Laws, is an instance of another kind of magisterial misfeasance; for here it was not a case of inflicting an excessive penalty, but of a miscarriage of justice in convicting the lad at all. There were also cases of a boy who was sentenced to a month's imprisonment for assault, and of another, aged fourteen, who was imprisoned for seven days for an act of indecency, which would have been much more wisely chastised with that number of strokes of a birch-rod. A little girl was sent to prison for stealing some articles of wearing apparel. But the saddest case of all, perhaps, was that of two little boys of seven and nine, who were committed to prison for seven days by the Scarborough magistrates for "damage to growing turnips." These sentences, it appears—and in that, perhaps, there is an element of consolation—are very unequally distributed over the district. "One magistrate alone," said Mr. Hutton, "was guilty, if he might say so, of sending seventeen of these children to prison. Twenty-six of the cases came from the Cleveland district, five from Whitby, and only nine from the rest of the Riding." Sir Reginald Graham, on this, observed that it would be a great relief to the Court in general if Mr. Hutton would name the "guilty magistrate"; but this, apparently, he did not think fit to do.

Nor was it, perhaps, desirable that he should have responded to the suggestion. We do not suppose that the particular magistrate or magistrates who have passed these sentences are less humane men than the rest of their colleagues, or that they deserve to be held up to obloquy as men who consciously administer the law in a harsher and less merciful fashion than their brother justices. In all probability, they are guilty of no worse fault than that of performing their functions in a more or less mechanical fashion, and of considering what punishment it is permissible rather than what it is wise to inflict. They are not more cruel, but simply more inconsiderate, than their neighbours, and merely supply a fresh illustration of that perpetually illustrated truth that "evil is wrought by want of thought, As well as want of heart." All over the world, however, the evil which is due to the former agency constitutes a very heavy addition to the sum of mischief and misery which is of man's creation; and it is the business of all of us to do our utmost to reduce it. We cannot think that the magistrates who have passed these sentences have ever seriously considered the probable effect of their sentences, not merely upon the youthful delinquents but through them upon society at large. It is quite certain that they can never have weighed the injury inflicted on the community by the offences which they were punishing, against the injury which it is certain to incur from the operation of the punishment. Had they done so, we may affirm with the utmost confidence that Mr. Hutton would never have had so miserable a tale to tell to the Quarter Sessions of the North Riding. It is, of course, true that the public has an interest in deterring boys, however young, from the commission of petty thefts. It is true—though a less important truth—that youth, even extreme youth, should be restrained from doing damage to growing turnips. We will even admit it to be true—though here we enter upon still more doubtful ground—that society has a right to be protected against the dangers which might arise from allowing unlimited licence to the young in the matter of pitch-and-toss. The public, however, has an infinitely higher interest in keeping its juvenile population free from the demoralising influence of contact with criminals; society has a much stronger claim to protection against the dangers attendant on the wholesale manufacture of gaol-birds. In its solicitude, whatever that may amount to, for the timely correction of trifling offences, it does not wish the administrators of the law to sow the seeds from which will spring hereafter a crop of really serious crime. It does not want the apple-stealer to be converted into the professional pickpocket, nor the devastator of turnips into the garroter of elderly gentlemen. It does not wish the figurative advance "from pitch-and-toss to manslaughter" to take shape as a living reality of our social life. "When a boy I prigged an apple, When a youth I faked a cly, When a man I shot a keeper, And for this I am to die." The author of this once well-known distich did not, it is to be feared, intend to point any particular moral lesson, but it would be no bad account of that "rogue's progress" for which an unwise sentence on a trivial transgressor has too often been responsible.

Nobody of course desires that ill-reared and untended children should be allowed to commit even insignificant breaches of the law with impunity. Our magistrates are placed where they are for the purpose, among other things, of correcting such juvenile misdeeds. But they are also there for the purpose of checking and not of promoting crime in general; and this ought they to have done without leaving the other undone. There is no necessity whatever for giving leave and licence to juvenile irregularities, merely because it is inexpedient to send children to prison. Mr. Lowther, M.P., seemed to think that this is not so. He observed that if petty sessions had power to send children to industrial schools that would be a solution of the difficulty, but he thought Mr. Hutton would admit that in the absence of that power his remedy for crime would resolve itself into one of impunity. This, however, as Mr. Hutton pointed out, is not the case. Justices in petty sessions have the power to commit juvenile offenders to a reformatory; and though, as the law stands, a previous conviction and imprisonment are necessary to give rise to that power, this requirement can be easily met by sentencing a youthful delinquent to a day's imprisonment for his first offence, after which he will be fully qualified for committal to a reformatory on his second appearance. No doubt the law needs amending in such a way as to enable magistrates to dispense with this qualifying process, which might, moreover, be difficult to apply in a case in which the first offence was of a somewhat less trivial character than usual; but, save in these very exceptional instances, it is perfectly possible for magistrates to correct childish delinquencies in the manner above set forth, and they are in no sense limited to the alternative of demoralising the offender or letting him go scot-free. It would appear that children are sometimes sentenced to imprisonment with a view to compel contumacious parents to pay their fines. This was the case with the seven-year and nine-year-old malefactors at Scarborough; and Mr. Lowther seemed to think that a satisfactory explanation of the sentence. We cannot agree with him. The parental contumacy had nothing whatever to do with, and would not possibly enhance, the infantile criminality; and the community may most reasonably object to having to pay the cost of maintaining these children in prison, and perhaps many times hereafter as adults, for no better reason than that their mother "cheeked" the Scarborough magistrates. In the disputes which take place in certain classes of society a baby is a comparatively familiar missile; but such use of it is beneath the dignity, not to say the justice, of the law. Children ought not to be punished for their parents' offences, and they ought never to be punished by imprisonment in the ordinary sense of the word at all. In nineteen cases out of twenty the requirements of the situation would be amply met by a little mild corporal punishment, and, for offences too grave to be dealt with in this way, a reformatory and not a prison is the proper corrective.

Are fried fish refreshments? Such was the question that came before the Wandsworth magistrates the other day. The Excise authorities, ever keen after penalties, prosecuted an unfortunate dealer in fish for selling it fried without having taken out a licence for the sale of refreshments. There is a popular impression that only drinks are "refreshing" in an exciseable sense, but the prosecuting solicitor asserted that the Judges had decided otherwise, and that solid food, if cooked, came under this head. This may be the law, but surely it has not been as yet generally enforced. London, to the South and East, swarms with little shops haunted late at night by the poor, who buy cooked food in several forms, also ginger-beer, lemonade, and other non-intoxicant drinks. Are they all to be prosecuted because they have not taken out licences? There is still a humbler class of dealers in refreshments—the men who sell coffee and tea and hot potatoes at street-corners, in portable stalls. Must they also be taxed? Many of these little shops and stalls are the restaurants of the decent poor, of the men and women who shun the public-house. Is it wise, even if the letter of the law be on the side of the authorities, to prosecute them for the sake of the few pounds that might be brought into the Treasury? Mr. Goschen may, like Vespasian, say "Non olet" of the money as it comes in, which is more than can be said of the fried fish itself; but is it not rather inconsiderate for the richest Exchequer in the world to exact onerous taxation on the poor little luxuries of the working classes? When we consider the interest of the State in keeping the industrial people out of the public-houses—for drinking fills our workhouses and gaols, and costs us a great deal—it would almost pay the Government to tempt men and women into sobriety by subsidising coffee-shops and refreshment-houses where the adulterated alcohol of the gin-shops was not poured forth to degrade and inflame our working men. Our authorities, however, go to the other extreme; they tax the innocent refreshment-places where the wayfaring man seeks a sober treat. It is an actual fact that if a belated Londoner buys a sandwich in one of these shops for cooked meat he is forbidden by the vendor to eat it on the spot, lest the police may detect the "fraud on the revenue," and have the dealer summoned for not taking out a "refreshment licence." Surely this is very petty regulation indeed, and if applied all round must provoke indignant complaint.

London is not happy in its refreshment-places, whether we soar to the best or consider the not very elegant establishments where they sell fried fish. Let us imagine a man and his wife or a party of friends asking each other "Where shall we dine?" on a summer evening in the middle of London. The fancy is not wild, for we sometimes have English summers; we remember more than one. Occasionally, too, the atmosphere is hot and heavy, and the wearied worker seeks not only food but fresh air and pleasant surroundings. On such an evening an ideal dining-place would be a large cool room looking out directly on a gay square or place, or opening into a delicious garden. But what do the diners find? They are drawn towards some enormous hotel or restaurant situate in the very centre of London, and are immediately ushered into a big room at the back, lighted by electricity or gas, with no outlook whatsoever. In Paris, Vienna, Berlin, Brussels, and other cities, you may dine looking on a garden or in the garden itself. You may sip your wine or beer and smoke your cigar on the street-pavement, and observe the stream of humanity. In London, although you offered a very high price, you could secure no such luxury. Not even in the suburbs of the great city are there restaurants with gardens; you must go six, seven, or eight miles off to dine with plenty of fresh air around you. This absence of open-air entertainment in England is the more remarkable as we are a people passionately fond of all kinds of outdoor games, sports, and amusements. It would seem, however, as if when we resolved to dine or even drink we were half-ashamed of ourselves and shunned the public gaze. Why do we in summer shut ourselves up in stuffy dining-rooms instead of demanding refreshment-houses surrounded by open spaces and ornamented with trees? We have parks equal to any in Europe, and superior to the majority; but the refreshment-places allowed in or near them are usually restricted to lemonade and to what Mr. Gilbert, in "The Sorcerer," called "the rollicking bun." Talking of the miseries of Whitechapel, somebody has recently suggested that if we could start in that neighbourhood what the Germans call a "beer-garden," with lager beer as the only alcoholic beverage, we should do much to wean the people from the public-house. The lager beer, of which the German student can swallow thirty glasses without effect, is so non-intoxicant that in some American States, where there are imitations of the Maine Anti-liquor Law, it is allowed to be consumed—just as we tolerate ginger ale and other popular drinks, although they contain a certain small percentage of alcohol. The Excise authorities prosecute publicans who mix too much water with their drinks, but they are not searching and severe enough against the introduction of really injurious ingredients. In the poorer quarters of London the people obtain for their money vile spirits, bad ale, and the worst sherry. Beyond merely negative precautions, however, it would be worth the attention of our philanthropists to elevate the entertainment of the people by providing cheap, innocent, and tempting places of refreshment. Coffee, cocoa, tea, lemonade, fried fish, ham and beef, sausages, hot potatoes—all such foods and drinks are rivals to the brandy and gin of the public-houses, and the State should encourage, not tax, them. The old Roman patricians fed the poor; they certainly never sent their officials to tax the fried fish of the plebeians.

It may be inferred that the licence on refreshment shops is a kind of indirect protection to the whiskey-seller, who is the Chancellor of the Exchequer's best friend. In this connection it is sometimes remarked what a blow it would be to our finance if England suddenly became sober. When we had to pay a large lump sum on account of the Alabama award, the consumption of exciseable liquors fortuitously increased, so that, as a witty public man remarked, "We drank ourselves out of the Alabama difficulty." There is, in fact, an impression that all kinds of expenditure are equally good for trade. This is an obvious fallacy. If British people ceased to-morrow to spend their one hundred and forty millions yearly on strong drink they would have the money in their pockets. Instead of pouring it down their throats in fiery potations, it could rebuild the slums of London, Liverpool, Manchester, Birmingham, and all our great cities and towns—driving away dirt and disease, if not depravity. Then there would be something to show for the money. At present the results are finally visible in the statistics of the workhouse and the gaol—although, of course, there is intermediate employment to several honest men. Yet although money, spent no matter how, must supply wages to a certain number of people, there is a difference between spending it in transitory pleasures and laying it out in solid advantages to the community. The half-million given by Peabody to London was at first expended in wages to the workmen who built the dwellings, but it has come back in the shape of rents, and the capital has actually increased. If the half-million had been fired away in gunpowder in a glorious war or spent in making so many thousand people tipsy at a series of fetes, there would be now no result, and the capital would have disappeared. If, therefore, the English revenue lost heavily at first because Englishmen preferred sobriety to drunkenness and deserted the public-houses for innocent refreshments elsewhere, the money saved would not be missed. It would show itself in more furniture in the poor man's home, better clothes on his back, and perhaps a house of his own over his head. We cannot, therefore, share the nervous trepidation of the Excise officials over their paltry licensing dues, nor approve of their sending spies to little dealers in order to detect the consumption of fried fish. When Pall-mall clubs are allowed to go untaxed, it seems hard that the poor shopkeepers and stallkeepers of the East and South should be worried, harried, and chased. If the excisemen really desire to be active, why do they not arrest the automatic machines for selling sweetmeats and chocolate? Are not these refreshments? Or have all the stands that supply cigarettes taken out a licence to sell tobacco?

Fashionable, intellectual, and æsthetic London will flock to-day to the Grosvenor Gallery to enjoy the private view of some three hundred singularly interesting specimens of that which, regarded under different aspects, may be characterised as a very ancient and, comparatively speaking, as an altogether modern art. The happy thought has occurred to Sir Coutts Lindsay of holding an exhibition exclusively composed of works in pastel, a fascinating craft which may be said to hold a middle rank between drawing and painting. The draughtsman, strictly so called, executes his designs with the lead pencil, the pen, or the chalk crayon. With the last he may work in black and white on a tinted ground; he may even use brown chalks; but with the employment of red, which the French call "sanguine," his attributes as a draughtsman stop; directly he uses a brush and water size or oil as a medium he becomes a painter. Now the worker in pastel is essentially a worker "in the dry." Moisture is the greatest foe that he has to fear. His foundation is paper of a certain grain, or prepared wood or parchment well endued with pounce. Taffety and linen have often been used extensively by pastellists, and some of the Italian craftsmen work upon a canvas coated with parchment size with which a little powdered marble has been mixed, the whole surface when dry being carefully rubbed down with pumice-stone. Instead of a palette and brushes, the pastellist needs only a long box, the compartments in which are filled with coloured crayons, carefully assorted in nicely graduated tints. Three kinds of crayons are at his command—the hard, the medium, and the soft. The last are so tender that they may be spread over the drawing-paper with the finger or with a stump of paper or leather. The medium and hard pencils are cut to a point, and are used in putting in vigorous effects and in sharp hatchings. The crayons themselves have a basis either of pipeclay or of some mucilaginous vehicle; and on an average the pastellist does not require more than thirty tints. One great peril which the artist has to avoid is that the slightest grease should adhere to his work, for in such a case the coloured crayonage falls off and leaves a dismal white patch on the drawing. Reduced to its first principles pastel is only so much very fine polychromatic dust spread with artistic ingenuity over a given plane; but so feebly adhesive is it to the surface to which it is applied that for purposes of retouching any quantity of the drawing can be removed by the simple attrition of a dry badger's hair tail; and it is a melancholy but undeniable fact that were a number of unframed pastels left in a lady's boudoir a too scrupulous housemaid, armed only with a feather-brush or a duster, might, in the course of five minutes, totally obliterate a score of masterpieces. For this imperative reason, pastels must be always carefully covered with glass. Attempts have been made, from time to time, to varnish these fascinating works; but, even when the varnish has been successfully laid on the crayoned surface, it has been found to possess the serious drawback of being shiny, and consequently reflective, like a painting in oil. A genuine pastel should have the even, glossy, but not glassy, appearance of a very finely-executed specimen of Gobelins tapestry, over which, however, pastel has one great advantage—in the circumstance that, when it is executed with judiciously-selected colours, worked up into well-prepared crayons, it should never fade.

Works of fine art do not ordinarily afford texts for austere moralists to dilate upon; but pastel happens to have afforded Diderot, who was as consummate an art-critic as he was an essayist, with the opportunity of uttering a very bitter monition to La Tour, one of the greatest pastellists of the eighteenth century in France. "Remember, man," said the philosopher, quoting the Vulgate, "that thou art dust, and that to dust thou wilt return"—adding, "and thy pastels also." Notwithstanding Diderot's sneer and the acknowledged fragility of pastels, the works of La Tour himself, of Greuze, and of Rosalba have preserved all their original freshness and brightness. Greuze, when he was asked why he would not allow one of his pastels to be varnished, demanded, in reply, whether any one would think of varnishing a peach or the cheek of a pretty girl? And it is precisely the peach-like bloom attainable which renders this art so exquisitely suitable for the simulation of the carnations of the human form divine. At the same time, although portraiture, fruit, and flowers are especially the objects on which the pastellist may most fitly display his talent, the art lends itself favourably to the delineation of landscape and architecture, of dead game, and still life in general. The painter of history, however, has, with more or less reason, been supposed to be justified in setting his face altogether against pastel, which was stigmatised by Grimm as being wholly unworthy the attention of a great master. Yet the great masters in question worked with water, with gum, with wax, with white of egg, and with glue as mediums centuries before the invention of oil-painting. As to the origin of pastel, it is as difficult to discover as the origin of cosmetics, needles, stays, and wigs. To the great glory of the female sex, there seems to be ample reason to ascribe the honour of having been the first notable workers of pastel in its modern form to two German ladies, Frau Vermein and Fraulein Hail, who both flourished at Dantzic during the first half of the eighteenth century. The tyrant man, however, in his usual envious and ill-conditioned spirit, has insinuated that one Johann Alexander Theile, who lived at Erfurt in 1740, was the first modern practitioner in pastel. Whether the masculine professor at Erfurt or the feminine artists at Dantzic were really the revivers of pastel matters very little when it is remembered that the Egyptians excelled in the production of drawings in black and red chalk, heightened with white, on a tinted ground. To come much nearer our own day, the galleries of the Louvre contain a large number of graceful portraits of personages of the time of Henri II. and Charles IX., which are practically pastels. Many more tints than those used in the Renaissance period may be observed in the celebrated pastel portrait of a nun in the Louvre, which was drawn by Dumoulier the elder in 1615. It must be admitted, nevertheless, that pastel as we now recognise it was perfected by a glorious succession of artists in the eighteenth century. The most famous professors of the art in France were La Tour, Liotard, Greuze, and Vigée, together with three ladies named Tocqué, Guijard, and Rosini. Germany produced a notable pastellist called Lundberg, while in Italy the palm must be awarded to the famous Venetian, likewise a lady, Rosalba Carriera, who as a pastellist has never been surpassed, and of whom La Tour was scarcely the equal. It is pleasant to know that this really great woman artist lived to the advanced age of eighty-seven, although during the last years of her life she was deprived of sight.

Of contemporary professors of pastel in France, England, or Germany, it might be invidious to speak in this place, inasmuch as to do so would be to trench on the domains of artistic criticism. Quite apart, however, from the merits of the works exhibited at the Grosvenor Gallery, Sir Coutts Lindsay may be sincerely congratulated on his effort to popularise an essentially graceful and fascinating art. Notwithstanding Grimm's ill-natured strictures, there is really no reason why painters of the highest class should disdain to avail themselves of a technical process which any practical draughtsman can master in a comparatively short time, and which, when mastered, opens up almost illimitable facilities of execution to those who are endowed with the faculty of the colourist or with the capacity for producing impressive effects in light and shade. In female portraiture and in the delineation of flowers, fruit, and game, pastel lends itself to almost microscopic delicacy of manipulation; but, on the other hand, the proficient pastellist can, if his eye and hand be sure, and his perception of effect wide-reaching and far-grasping, conjure up from his box of crayons landscapes now sunny as those of Claude or Cuyp, now savage and rugose as those of Gaspar Poussin or Salvator Rosa. Pastel is an astonishingly beautiful interpreter of the efforts of those who devote themselves mainly to depicting nature unadorned; while its aid is quite as valuable in the representation of draperies, both in repose and floating. Pastel, again, under the proper supervision of the master, might be made a very important element in art education. One of the cardinal faults of artistic training in this country is that the pupil is not allowed to devote sufficient time to the thorough mastery of outline drawing, whether that drawing be of the nature of practical geometry, of anatomy of the external human form, or of drapery. Imperfectly practised in outline drawing, he is then set to waste the most precious years of his youth in painfully stippling up chalk drawings from the round or from the life; and no sooner is he emancipated from this uninstructive drudgery than he rushes in hot haste, and wholly unprepared, into oil-painting. It would be infinitely better for him were he made to pass through a preliminary stage of pastel, in which mistakes can be so easily corrected, and in which he may almost imperceptibly, but steadily, be led towards proficiency as a colourist. There is, finally, a less exalted but a very practical reason why the revival of pastel should be encouraged by every possible means. Miniature painting has been virtually killed by photography; but the palest photographic basis will serve as the groundwork for the production of a superb pastel. The art is one thoroughly suited to the agile fingers and the delicate perception of colour and harmony possessed by women. Pastel is, in fine, an exquisite kind of tapestry-working in tinted dust, and, pursued by ladies, would pay ten times better than art-needlework. The greatest pastellists of the past have been women, and we see no cause or impediment why the ladies of the Victorian era should not strive to emulate the renown of Rosalba Carriera.

The Court.

BALMORAL, Oct. 19.

The Queen went out yesterday morning with their Royal Highnesses Prince and Princess Henry of Battenberg.

In the afternoon her Majesty drove out, accompanied by her Royal Highness Princess Frederica.

The Marquis of Lansdowne, G.C.M.G., kissed hands on his appointment as Viceroy of India, and took leave of the Queen.

The Prince of Wales will visit Lord and Lady Hindlip, at Doveridge Hall, during the Derby races. His Royal Highness will return to town on the afternoon of Nov. 14. Towards the end of October the Prince and Princess of Wales will commence entertaining a series of visitors at Sandringham, though neither of the annual balls will take place this year, on account of the death of the late Emperor Frederick of Germany.

Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, accompanied by Princesses Louise, Victoria, and Maud of Wales and suite, witnessed the performance of "The Yeomen of the Guard" at the Savoy Theatre last evening.

The Duchess of Albany has become a patroness of the Bethnal-green Free Library.

His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge has consented to open the new headquarters of the 2nd City of London Rifle Volunteers, in Farringdon-road, on the 10th prox. The prizes of the corps will be presented on the same occasion.

Lord Londonderry, Lord Brassey, and Lord Wenlock have accepted invitations to the banquet at Middlesbro' on the 25th inst., at which the Right Hon. W. H. Smith is to be entertained by the Tees Conservancy Commissioners.

Lord Cross, who has been acting for the last fortnight as Minister in attendance upon her Majesty at Balmoral, has returned to his country seat, Eccle Riggs, Lancashire.

Mr. Ritchie will to-day arrive at Balmoral, as Minister in attendance upon the Queen.

The Dowager Duchess of Montrose and Mr. Milner, who have been entertaining at Newmarket General and Mrs. Owen-Williams, Sir John Willoughby, and Mr. Delacour, have arrived at Belgrave-square. They return to Newmarket again next week.

Lady Cecilia Rose, accompanied by her brother, Lord Greenock, has started on a few weeks' tour to Gibraltar, Tangiers, and Madrid.

The Duke of Norfolk has returned from staying at Heron's Ghyll, Uckfield, Sussex, where he went to attend his sister Lady Philippa Howard's marriage with Dr. Stewart. The ceremony took place quite privately on Thursday last.

His Excellency the Netherlands Minister and Countess de Bylandt are expected to arrive at their residence in Grosvenor-gardens in the course of next week, after several months' congé.

Lord and Lady Ellesmere have been entertaining a party at Stetchworth Park for the racing and shooting, including Lady Mabel Egerton, Miss Phipps, Miss M'Intyre, Colonel Montgomery, Captain Anderton, and Mr. M'Gregor.

Sir Henry Selwin-Ibbetson, M.P., has returned to town from Down Hall, Essex. The right hon. gentleman's health, although fairly good, is still the cause of much anxiety to his friends.

The Earl and Countess of Cathcart have returned to Grosvenor-place for the winter, having let their place in Yorkshire.

Lord George Hamilton, M.P., has accepted an invitation to open the Hornsey National Hall on Nov. 17.

Earl Cowper has intimated his willingness to serve on the Hertford County Council, and Sir T. Fowell Buxton has come forward as a candidate for the Waltham Abbey Division of Essex.

Mr. A. J. Balfour, Chief Secretary for Ireland, arrived at Chester at five o'clock yesterday afternoon, and drove to Saighton Towers with his private secretary, Mr. George Wyndham, whose guest he will be for a short time. The right hon. gentleman was recognised at the railway station, and was enthusiastically cheered.

A Hawarden correspondent telegraphs that since Earl Granville's arrival at Hawarden Castle, on a visit to Mr. Gladstone, his Lordship has been slightly indisposed, but yesterday was so much better that he will proceed to Liverpool to-day to fulfil his engagement there.

The Bishop of Ripon has instituted the Rev. George Dent Wharram, M.A., to the Vicarage of Holy Trinity, Buslingthorpe, Yorks.

M. Catalani, Premier Secretary of the Italian Embassy, arrived from Italy last evening. He will act as Italian Chargé d'Affaires till the successor of the late General Count di Robilant is appointed.

Lord Westmoreland, we regret to hear, is lying seriously ill at his residence, Mount-street, Grosvenor-square, suffering from inflammation of the lungs. Dr. Barton Smith is in attendance upon him.

It is stated that Mr. Robertson, M.P., Solicitor-General for Scotland, has been appointed Lord Advocate for Scotland, in the place of Mr. J. H. A. Macdonald, who has accepted the post of Lord Justice Clerk of Scotland.

The Duchess of FitzJames died on Monday at Brooklands, near Chertsey, in her eighty-first year, after an illness of several weeks. The late Duchess was on a visit to Captain and Mrs. Barron, whose daughter is married to Count FitzJames.

On Monday morning the funeral of the late Count di Robilant, Italian Ambassador to Great Britain, will take place at 11.30, and will be of a strictly private character. The funeral service will be celebrated in the Church of the Assumption (Bavarian Chapel), Warwick-street.

Sir Pryse Pryse, of Gogerdan, Welsh landowner, has intimated to his tenantry his intention of continuing for another three years a reduction of 15 per cent. on rents.

The first winter meeting of the Gallery Club in the Grosvenor Gallery will take place to-morrow.

The offices of the Royal Almonry have been removed from 36, Spring-gardens to 6, Craig's-court, Whitehall, where all communications should be addressed for the future.

Prince Albert Victor in Manchester.—Prince Albert Victor of Wales arrived in Manchester from York last night, and will to-day open the Rusholme Recreation Grounds, lay the memorial stone of a new wing of the Ancoats Hospital, visit a lads' club, and be presented with an address on behalf of the Corporation. The Prince was met at Victoria Station yesterday by the mayor and members of the reception committee, and by Sir J. Fergusson, M.P., and others, and was warmly cheered. A guard of honour was furnished by the 1st Battalion Lancashire Fusiliers, and a procession was formed to the Town Hall, the Prince being enthusiastically welcomed by large crowds of people who filled the streets en route. At night he was entertained to dinner by the mayor, and he remained at the Town Hall as the guest of the corporation. A torch-light procession of members of the lads' club marched round the square in front of the hall during the evening and sang the National Anthem.

Mr. Goschen.—With reference to the resolution of the Aberdeen Town Council, carried by twelve votes to eleven, to present the freedom of the city to Mr. Goschen, a telegram has been received from the right hon. gentleman expressing his sense of the compliment paid him, but in view of the fact that the proffered bestowal runs counter to the sentiments of a large minority, he begs in the present state of political feeling that no action be taken on the resolution of the Council.

Mr. Gladstone's Visit to the Midlands.—At the meeting of the Bilston Commissioners last night, permission having been granted to the Liberal Club to erect a triumphal arch over one of the principal streets on the occasion of Mr. Gladstone passing through the town in November next on his way from Birmingham to the residence of the Hon. P. Stanhope at Wombourne, it was further resolved to hoist the Union Jack on the top of the Town Hall.

Suez Canal.—According to a telegram, dated Ismailia yesterday, twenty-two steamers are detained in consequence of the accident to the Sumatra, previously reported.

PARIS DAY BY DAY.

[BY SPECIAL WIRE.]

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

PARIS, Friday Night.

The rush to the Prefecture of Police is continuing with unabated energy in this delightful weather, and foreigners of many nationalities are reporting themselves and signing their names in obedience to M. Floquet's decree. Men who are accustomed to business are going through the ordeal with becoming resignation, but this is not invariably the case with ladies, some of whom resent all the questions as to their age and condition as almost a personal affront. I hear that efforts have been made, but so far in vain, to enable nervous spinsters to satisfy the authorities by sending to the Prefecture some representative armed with their signature and the necessary particulars. It certainly is not very pleasant for an unprotected female to be compelled to undertake the pilgrimage to the Boulevard Saint Michel, to traverse the courtyard, in which troopers of the Municipal Guard may be exercising, to climb up three flights of a dingy staircase in the barracks of this gallant corps, and then to elbow her way to the front in a shabby room the atmosphere of which is not always of the sweetest sort. An amusing incident occurred a day or two ago, when a lady, putting in an appearance at the appropriate bureau, insisted that a couple of windows should be opened at least while she was there. Surely M. Floquet had not summoned her to this extemporised office in order that she might be asphyxiated, she exclaimed. Did the clerks wish to see her fall fainting to the ground? A stove was burning, there was no ventilation, and she really must beg the officials to open the windows while she transacted her business. She gained her point, despite the groans and protests of an elderly gentleman, who declared that the draught would be his death. Never, however, was business dispatched with more zeal and promptitude, and ere the lady could look round a paper duly filled up was handed to her for signature, and she took her departure with triumph written on her face. This is nothing to the scene of which an incensed spinster has just been the heroine. She proceeded to the Prefecture, and was answering various questions quietly enough when suddenly she pulled up with a sort of hysterical scream, and, rising from her seat, declared that then and there she must see the Prefect of Police and demand the instant dismissal of the clerk, who had grossly insulted her. The poor woman had been asked in the most natural way in the world if she had any children. This was too much for her outraged feelings, and although the chief official did his utmost to pacify her by pointing out that no offence had been intended, and that this question was invariably put, she departed in high dudgeon, vowing that the affair would speedily be brought to the notice of her Sovereign's representative in Paris. This lady is by no means the only member of her sex who has resented this impertinence. At the outset we were assured that only a few necessary questions would be asked. On what ground respectable single women who can give ample proof of their identity and so forth are subjected at the hands of young clerks to so extraordinary an examination it would be interesting to learn. Some ladies are declaring that nothing will induce them to submit to such an inquisition. As a matter of fact this decree is anything but popular with foreigners, and I hear that as soon as it was promulgated a goodly number of persons who had intended to pass the winter here, prolonging their sojourn in the metropolis into the spring, and possibly into the summer, changed their minds, and decided on remaining at home. It was probably owing to a suspicion that such might be the case that it was afterwards given out that the decree would not affect persons who were merely travelling in France for a limited period. At any rate, the decree has led to many complaints and more misgivings. The popular notion is that it is aimed at alien workmen. Yesterday 2,454 foreigners reported themselves at the Prefecture, the Belgians retaining the lead with 533. There were 147 English.

The Prince of Wales, accompanied by Lord Lytton, General Ellis, the Hon. Harry Tyrwhitt-Wilson, and Mr. Austin Lee, visited M. Pasteur's establishment in the Rue Vauclin to-day, and saw several patients undergoing inoculation for rabies. Afterwards his Royal Highness went over the Pasteur Institute, which is nearly completed, and will be opened in a short time. The Prince of Wales will return to England on Sunday.

M. Clémenceau is a warm supporter of M. Floquet's Revision Bill. This was a matter of course, as the Prime Minister would never have adopted such a measure without previously assuring himself as to the assistance of the leader of the Extreme Left. In an address which he delivered this afternoon on assuming the presidency of the group, M. Clémenceau, going straight to the point, spoke of the "mutinous soldier," who was backed by the Monarchists and discontented, and said that the wanderers must be brought back to the fold by action. The Ministry had already entered the path of reforms. It felt the weight of its responsibility, it wished to act, and they would follow and help. The Cabinet had proposed Revision; they congratulated it, having been the first to demand a Republican Constitution for the Republic. Parliament was maligned with a view to preparing the advent of personal power, but they must remember that impersonal power was the very essence of a Republican régime. The ruins of France still attested the tragic history of personal domination. "Who can have forgotten what became of France when too many Frenchmen conceived a disgust for liberty?" cried M. Clémenceau. "To what did the most rare genius, to what did the adventurer lead? Both led to invasion, both to the dismemberment of the country. The nation survived by a miracle. The country of the rights of man has become the astonishment of other nations since the yoke has been presented to it with impunity. The enemy is watching and factions are menacing it, but we all know well that France, the France of the Revolution, will recover herself, that she will fling so much shame far from her, that she will foil all these intrigues, and escape all these perils. That will be the hour of the great effort. All the Republicans must help. A traitor will he be who is missing from his place." "France," concluded M. Clémenceau, "would not surrender her glory and freedom; she would remain mistress of her destiny, she would shatter whoever tried to force a master upon her, and, full of life, would resume the path of the revolution, her goal, the elevation of the rights of humanity and social justice. That would be the Republic." M. Clémenceau's address was heard with the utmost enthusiasm. Like M. Floquet, he regards the Revision as calculated to checkmate the Boulangist agitation against which it is mainly directed; but in other quarters the prejudice against the bill is rather on the increase than otherwise. At a meeting of the Republican groups of the Senate to-day the question as to whether it would be advisable to make an immediate demonstration against the bill was anxiously discussed, it being finally determined to wait until the measure came up from the Chamber, if it ever did. Meanwhile, in the best-informed circles it is thought that M. Floquet is safe in the saddle for some months, though M. Carnot would hardly relish his remaining in office until the general election. It was really a work of supererogation on the part of a Moderate organ to publish a formal denial to-day to a report that the President had begged some leading Opportunists to vote for the Revision Bill. M. Carnot's wishes lie in a very different direction.

The papers relating to General Boulanger's triple election in the Nord, the Somme, and the Charente Inférieure have just been distributed to the bureaux of the Chamber for examination. As no protest has been raised against these elections their verification will be a mere formality, and the House will probably be asked to validate them in a few days. The General is expected to select the Nord. He has already received addresses from different Departments, including Pas de Calais, the Jura, Vienne, Loir-et-Cher, and Eure-et-Loire, requesting him to stand for them at the general election, and others will probably follow their example.

Madame Amet, daughter of Napoleon's Junot, Duc d'Abrantès, and whose death was recorded the other day, was the only direct descendant of the soldier-duke. Her brother, the second Duc d'Abrantès died during the last Empire, leaving two daughters and no son. The title given to Junot was, therefore, about to become extinct, but the Princess Clotilde, to whom the Duchess d'Abrantès was Lady of Honour, asked Napoleon the Third to confer the ducal name and honours on a young Attaché, M. le Ray, who was about to be married to one of the daughters of the Second Duke. His Majesty cordially assented to this, and M. le Ray, who was the son of a wealthy stockbroker, became Duke d'Abrantès. The new duke distinguished himself in the Franco-German campaign, and during Gambetta's Ministry he was Secretary of the Embassy at Vienna. At the present time the Duke is an out and out Royalist, having become thoroughly tired of the bickerings in the Bonapartist camps. His mother, Madame le Ray, has a splendid house in Paris, and a chateau in the Mayenne, but she has an insatiable mania for travelling, and, with an energy which would have been worthy of Madame Pfeiffer, the Austrian lady explorer, she has done Greece, Egypt, Palestine, and Mesopotamia. She is now getting ready to run through the dominions of the Shah.

Meanwhile the death of Junot's daughter, at an advanced age and only in moderate circumstances, leads one to reflect on the changes and vicissitudes which many of the friends and followers of the Corsican Bonapartist have gone through. Madame Amet, the lady referred to, frequently meditated and commented upon these revolutions of the wheel of fortune. In her young days, when the First Bonaparte blazed in all his brilliancy and glory, Mademoiselle d'Abrantès and other maidens like her, who were daughters or relatives of Imperial potentates, princes, or peers lived, not only on the fat, but on the luxury of the land. "We were clothed," as the old lady who has just died at Passy used to say, "with purple and fine linen, and we shone with jewels and diamonds of rare and radiant lustre. We revelled in good things, and money in gold and silver was around us in open coffers, into which everybody could plunge a hand." After that came the catastrophe. Madame Amet was immured in conventual gloom against her wishes, but succeeded in escaping from the cloister and marrying the son of her old governess. During the last Empire she was befriended by the Empress, and received a pension, which was discontinued after Sedan. "But I have been lucky in my daughters," was one of the favourite observations of her who was once Mdlle. Junot D'Abrantès, and her daughter, the wife of the Comte de Mouy, helped her mother until her death. This kindness of her son-in-law and daughter was the supreme consolation of the deceased lady, who, by a harmless bit of trickery, was made to believe to the last that she was tolerably wealthy. She was always fond of descanting on the fortunes of the other daughters of Napoleon's dukes and generals. Sebastiani's daughter, as Madame Amet often reminded her friends, was murdered; Rapp's daughter led a miserable existence in the midst of splendour. The daughter of Suchet was always in feeble health, while others had skeletons in their closets, about which it would be invidious to enter into detail.

Nomadic Russians, with beetling eyebrows, shaggy hair, and a generally greasy appearance, may sometimes be seen wandering in droves along the brilliant Boulevards. They look like peasants or Moujiks out of the dramatic adaptations in French of the works of the Russian realists. You are often surprised to see these children of the snow and the steppes so far away from home, and are apt to wonder at their business in the most expensive city in the world. Some interesting particulars, however, have just been published respecting the low life members of the large Russian colony in Paris in connection with the registration of foreigners which is now taking place at the Prefecture of Police. They foregather, it seems, in the Latin quarter, where they have a kind of political pope, or patriarch, in the person of Peter Lavrof, an old Nihilist, who has been expelled from Russia. His room in the Rue Saint Jacques is piled from floor to ceiling with books. This place is the rendezvous of the male and female students of Russian nationality who are attending lectures in the Paris medical schools, and they delight in discussing politics, literature, medicine, and mathematics with their patriarchal compatriot. Lavrof has had an eventful career. He was born at Pskof in 1823, and went through a course of studies in the Russian School of Artillery, in which he succeeded Ostrogradsky in the professorial chair. In 1866 he was arrested in connection with the Karakosof affair, and was imprisoned, but escaped in 1870. After having lived in Switzerland and England he came to Paris in 1877, and is now busy with a tremendous treatise on modern thought. All the students and refugees gathered round Lavrof work hard at teaching, translating, and copying in order to support themselves while in Paris, and nearly every one of them has a severe struggle in order to make both ends meet. There is also a large colony of Russian and Polish students who attend the lectures, but who depend to a great extent on the assistance given to them by the Alliance Israelite. Most of the poorest students, male and female, live in community in an establishment in the Rue Flatters, where there are separate dormitories for the sexes and a common room for study. They take their meals in a kind of co-operative restaurant in the Avenue des Gobelins, where they act as their own cashiers, cooks, and waiters. The prices of the meals are reduced to the minimum figure, only horseflesh being consumed, with cheap bread, vegetables, and tea or coffee, wine being as rigidly excluded from the repasts as if the Muscovite wanderers were members of the Blue Ribbon movement. Wealthier students and artists of Russian, Polish, or Bulgarian nationality resort to a tavern kept by a Pole in the Latin quarter. In the Rue de la Glacière is a general library for all Slavs, and it was founded chiefly through the instrumentality of Tourgueneff, the novelist. Very few of these Slavonic people settle down in Paris, and after having completed their medical or artistic studies they make their way back to their native land. Of late years, since the Russian alliance has been a pet dream of French statesmen and citizens, the Muscovites in Paris are treated with every possible consideration, not only by officials, but also by such usually uncompromising persons as landlords and the concierges of houses in poor localities, by restaurateurs, and others with whom they come in similar contact. The labourers and general working people of Russian nationality live in the neighbourhood of Montmartre, and they are principally composed of persons whom the anti-Semitic movement of 1880 drove to more hospitable countries than their own. Most of them have been in America, where they did not prosper, whereas here in Paris, thanks to the assistance which they have from time to time received, most of them are thriving, and some of them have even been able to embark in business.

An instance of the instinct and fidelity of a young monkey comes from Batignolles, a suburb of Paris. A little boy (so says a French journal), the son of an inhabitant of that part of the city, was playing in one of the rooms of his father's flat with the monkey, which is a most intelligent and domesticated member of its species. The boy, in a fit of juvenile caprice, tied the cord of a window blind around his neck, and pretended to hang himself, to the immense amusement of his Simian playmate, which grinned and chattered on a chair. Suddenly the boy became livid, and began to cry, for the cord had got into a real noose around his neck. In a very short space of time the monkey took in the situation, and tried to undo the noose with its paws, but had to give up the attempt. It then hopped away to another room, where the boy's grandmother was sitting, and began to pull at her gown, to chatter, grimace, and look wistfully towards the door. At first, thinking that the animal wanted to bite her, the old lady was frightened, but seeing that it was endeavouring, with might and main, to drag her towards the door, she rose from her seat and went, piloted by the monkey, to the room where her grandson was moaning. The boy was instantly extricated from his perilous position, though it was some time before he recovered from his pain and fright. Jocko, the deliverer, says the French authority for this strange narrative, received a nice little tablet of chocolate cream for his splendid action, and he deserved it.

On the Bourse to-day the last quotations were: Three per Cents., 82f 62½c (a rise of 10c); Four and a Half per Cents., 105f 80c (a rise of 15c); Italians, 96f 80c (a fall of 7½c); Turks, 15f 47½c (a rise of 2½c); Spanish Exteriors, 73f 75c; Egyptian Unified, 425f; ditto Preference, 508f (for the account); Ottoman Bank, 539f 87c. Suez Canal shares closed at 2,241f 25c, and Rio Tinto at 618f. There was another rise in Home Funds to-day, and with the exception of Italians foreign stocks were firm. On the Petite Bourse the last quotations were: Spanish Exteriors, 73f 80c; Turks, 15f 52c; Egyptian Unified, 423f 75c; Ottoman Bank, 537f 18c; and Rio Tinto, 624f 37c.

TO-DAY'S ARRANGEMENTS.

Queen's Westminster Volunteers—Complimentary dinner to Sergeant Fulton, Queen's Prize Winner, 1888, at the Queen's Hall, James-street, Buckingham-gate, 7.30.

Bohemian Subscription Smoking Concert, Portman Rooms, Baker-street, 8.30 p.m., in Aid of King's College Hospital.

National Show of Fruit, Horticultural Society's Gardens, Chiswick (last day).

Yachting.—Nemesis Club, all classes, at Teddington, 2.30 p.m.

Football.—Canadians v. Old Carthusians, at the Oval; Maoris v. Midland Counties Union, at Birmingham.

German Commerce in the East.—The Central Society of German Merchants has presented a petition to the Imperial Chancellor that he should lend his assistance to the establishment of a direct service of freight steamers between Hamburg, Bremen, and the East Indies. The petition also expresses the hope that, in the event of the German shipowners not being able to carry out the scheme by their own efforts, support to the undertaking may be provided out of the Imperial Treasury.—Reuter.

EUROPEAN SITUATION.

[TELEGRAM FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

VIENNA, Oct. 19.

The Russian press continues to advocate a separate understanding with Austria on Eastern affairs, and displays increasing hostility towards Germany. This is particularly worthy of note, as it comes so soon after Kaiser William's visit to St. Petersburg. The principal organ of the Russian Foreign Office, writing in this strain, begins by recalling that Frederick the Great tried to contract an alliance with Russia, but failing in his endeavours he sought to estrange Russia from Austria. That policy has again been pursued at Berlin. Germany is trying to monopolise Russia's friendship and to sow enmity between her, Austria, and Turkey. Germany is likewise bent on turning Eastern complications to her own advantage. The Ministerial mouthpiece then goes on to say that Prince Bismarck's pretence that Germany is not interested in Eastern affairs is only a mask. He fears a substantial increase of Russia's military might in case the Dardanelles becomes Russian. Russia must reject the pressing offices of Germany and treat separately with Austria. Germany requires the alliance more than Austria, and this alliance has only served to strain the national resources of Austria, and to increase the burden of her budget. Such is the language of the Russian official press within a few weeks of the German Emperor's visit.

According to intelligence received in Catholic circles here, although the interview between the Emperor William and the Pope was on the whole of a friendly character, there was, nevertheless, some plain speaking on both sides. The Pope appears to have taken advantage of a unique opportunity and to have touched directly upon the Roman question. The Kaiser is said to have been quite equal to the occasion, and to have shattered in a twinkling the last vestige of hope in the Papal bosom. More is likely to be heard of this before long.

It is announced from Sofia that the diplomatic representatives of Austria-Hungary, Italy, Servia, Greece, and Roumania have called at the Palace, and written their names in the visiting book kept there for Princess Clementine of Coburg, Prince Ferdinand's mother. The fact that the German representative abstained from doing so necessarily gives the démarche of his colleagues a significance which it would perhaps not otherwise have had.

The Commander-in-Chief of the Austrian navy, Admiral Baron Sterneck, is to represent the Emperor of Austria at Athens on the occasion of King George's Jubilee. Baron Sterneck will proceed to Greece on board the Imperial yacht Greif, leaving Pola next Sunday. Whether an Austrian squadron will figure amongst the foreign vessels ordered for the occasion in Greek waters is uncertain. Several men-of-war are in readiness at Pola to start at a moment's notice. One of the chief features of the Jubilee festivities will be the Olympian Exhibition, which is to be opened on the 31st by the King of Greece, in presence of the foreign representatives.

GERMAN COURT AND POLITICS.

[TELEGRAM FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

BERLIN, Oct. 19.

Kaiser William is now on his way home, and will be loyally greeted by the Berlin Town Council on his return to his capital. His Majesty's health is, according to the Court Circular, excellent. His Majesty had a magnificent laurel wreath placed by an aide-de-camp yesterday on his illustrious father's coffin.

I am informed that a report has been circulated in London to the effect that at the instigation of Prince von Bismarck the Kaiserin Frederick is to be summoned to give evidence in the Geffcken trial. I should have taken no notice whatever of this insolent canard, for I feel sure that neither her Majesty nor Prince Bismarck has heard anything of the matter; but I happened this afternoon to have an exceptional opportunity of discovering something in connection with the circulators of this and similar false statements. I was assured by one who is thoroughly well informed, that this and other reports of a like character had no foundation whatever. "If," said my informant, "Prince Bismarck is irritated and afraid of his policy being interfered with, he will come down heavily on those who thwart him; but he has given many proofs of the kindness of his character before and after the late Kaiser's death, and it is not by him that mischief is being made. You must look elsewhere for those who are trying to bring about ill-feeling between your country and mine."

Attention continues to be drawn to East African affairs. If you read between the lines of the last passage of the interesting report of the conversation your correspondent at Rome had with Signor Crispi you may trace a desire on the part of the Italian Government to induce England to help them at Massowah. I gather that both the Italian and German Governments would like to get the British Cabinet to consent to a common action against the Arabs in Africa, but the matter is surrounded with difficulties. Some time ago I informed you that the authorities here were adverse to bombarding the coast towns. A change does not seem to have taken place in their views since then, but I have reason for believing that the Arabs will not get off scot free. Meanwhile Gerhard Rohlfs, formerly German Consul-General in Zanzibar, told a meeting at Bochum that at least 500 Germans ought to be equipped for the Emin Pasha expedition, and that the expense ought to be defrayed by the enormously rich Arabs at Zanzibar. It may safely be said that the German Government will insist upon some satisfaction—what that will be and what will be done afterwards is not yet settled.

The English newspapers have not yet (10.30 p.m.) reached Berlin—a delay such as has not occurred before except when due to a heavy snowstorm. An impression prevails that they have been stopped at the frontier.

THE EMPEROR FREDERICK'S DIARIES.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAM.]

BERLIN, Oct. 19.

Owing to the confiscation yesterday of the Freisinnige Zeitung for publishing an article entitled, "Leaves to the Memory of the Emperor Frederick," the solicitor of that journal has addressed a complaint to the authorities, in which he declares that the late Emperor during his lifetime gave all his diaries to the Empress Frederick with full liberty to publish or otherwise dispose of them as her Majesty might think fit. The solicitor refers to the Empress Frederick as a witness to the truth of his statements.

CAPTURE OF A SLAVE DHOW.

A BRITISH OFFICER KILLED.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAM.]

ZANZIBAR, Oct. 19.

While the steam launch of the British gunboat Griffon was going alongside an Arab slaver last night, the Arabs opened fire upon the British vessel, killing Lieutenant Cooper. The dhow was captured. The deceased officer will be buried here to-day.

THE BLACK MOUNTAIN WAR.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAM.]

SIMLA, Oct. 19.

General M'Queen has ordered the following movements of the force under his command: The first column and the reserve to march upon Trund, the second column to take the place of the first at Chittabut, on the crest of the Black Mountain. The third column will continue holding its present position. The fourth is moving up the Indus Valley. Trund is fourteen miles north of Oghi, the base of the columns which marched across the crest of the mountains. It is expected to be reached on Sunday next.

The following telegram has been received at the India Office, from the Viceroy, dated Oct. 19, 1888:

"Intelligence from Hazara. 14th October, no news of moment. 15th October, part second column returned Karum, part third to Panjgali. 16th October, first column destroyed Saidara with slight opposition; third column to Pabalgali; fourth crossed river, burnt half Palosi, and recrossed. 17th, fourth occupied Dilari."

Official intelligence received at Tangier from Fez, dated the 16th inst., announces the death of the Sultan of Morocco's mother. The Sultan is recovering from his recent illness, and has attended service at the Mosque.—Reuter.

Hungarian Titles.—Our Vienna correspondent writes: "A bill is about to be introduced in the Parliament at Pesth proposing the abolition of titles of nobility for the younger sons of the Hungarian nobility. It is further proposed to reconstitute the aristocracy by introducing the system of primogeniture, and to abide by the other conservative principles which have made the English peerage wealthy and powerful. Should this bill, which affects the wealthiest and most ancient families in the country, find a majority, Magyar society will undergo a radical transformation. The country swarms with titled men, many of whom, since the abolition of the serf system, have drifted to poverty. They cannot, consistently with their social position, work otherwise than in the service of the State, and no Government can provide posts and places for them all. The new bill offers a remedy to this long-standing evil."

WESTMINSTER ABBEY.

AN INTERESTING PROPOSAL.

A correspondent writes that a proposal has been made, and is likely to take practical shape, for providing a "Campo Santo" close to the Abbey for the sepulchres and memorials of our great dead; in which case no further interments would be permitted in the Abbey itself. The reason for this step being considered advisable is that not more than fifteen to twenty burials can possibly take place there for mere want of space. As regards statues, there is room for at most three more—one in the northern transept, another near the west door as a pendant to Lord Shaftesbury's, and the third elsewhere. Two busts only can now be added; and it has been necessary to place Mr. Forster's memorial, the most recently set up, out of the way in the Northern Ambulatory. Mr. Fawcett's, in the Baptistry, is in a very dark place, and it is impossible to see the beauties of the work; while Matthew Arnold's bust will probably find a not very prominent position. These inconsistencies, it is pointed out, are due to want of room. At the same time it is felt that the associations of the Abbey, as a national mausoleum, should be retained as far as possible. Westminster Abbey as a place of memorial and of burial of distinguished Englishmen has exerted a powerful stimulus upon the national character; and to many of our heroes it was natural to look forward to the Abbey as their last resting-place. It must be remembered that no country in the world has such a visible record of its history. There is danger that the continuity of that history will be broken unless public spirit averts it, for if nothing be done the Abbey, in the old sense as a burial-place of worthies and a sculpture gallery of the nation's heroes, must cease to exist.

It is proposed to revive, in a modified form, the scheme of the Prince Consort, which involved the demolition of Abingdon-street, throwing open to view the ancient Jewel House at the rear, and making a splendid approach to the Houses of Parliament. The precise extent of ground needed is not stated. Probably some, or all, of the seven or eight houses fronting Poet's Corner and Old Palace-yard would have to be acquired. These properties are in private hands, and one of them has recently changed ownership. On this site, connected it might be with the Abbey by a cloister running from Poet's Corner, it is suggested should be erected a building to be called a Victorian Chapel. Its architecture would be worthy of its surroundings and of its purpose. The following points are open to discussion: Whether interments of public men should in a few special cases be permitted in this chapel, or whether these burials should be wholly discontinued? In Lord Shaftesbury's case a public funeral was held, but the interment was elsewhere, and a memorial in the Abbey has been erected. That precedent might conveniently be followed. A second point to be determined is the desirability of removing some of the cumbrous and disfiguring monuments in the Abbey to the chapel, thus making room for others in the Abbey itself.

The undertaking must, if set on foot, be a national one, because the Dean and Chapter have no funds available. Their property was handed over to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, partly with a view to provide for the proper maintenance of the fabric of the Abbey. During ten years £60,000 will have been spent upon the restoration of the exterior, which was in a dangerous condition. Four thousand pounds is needed annually for this purpose. The allowance to the Dean and Chapter meets this expenditure, and the cost of the services; but there is no margin. The fees paid to the Dean and Chapter for burials and monuments are handed to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners; and the latter have no power to remit them. In the case of a national memorial the Government annuls the fee, but where the cost of a monument is defrayed by private or public subscription, the fees must be paid. The money so obtained is spent in repairs; and it is an interesting fact that the outside of the Abbey had not been touched since the time of Sir Christopher Wren.

It is understood that the Dean and Chapter favour the new scheme heartily, although it would entail upon them losses and drawbacks. They support the proposal upon public grounds. When established, the control of the Victorian Chapel may be vested either in the representatives of Parliament, or in the existing authorities. An appeal, our correspondent adds, is shortly to be made to public spirit and to patriotism in this matter. If it were an American venture, he suggests, some wealthy private individual would probably find the funds at once. But it is necessary that something, at all events, should be done, and done soon, for the plain and simple reason that, both as regards graves and statues, the Abbey is already overcrowded.

THE PARNELL COMMISSION.

The alterations in Probate Court I. for the purposes of the proceedings in the Special Commission on Monday next are now completed. Two additional rows of seats have been added to the front of the gallery, while the sides over the two entrances to the court have been similarly utilised, thus giving increased seating accommodation for about sixty people. This space, it is understood, will be devoted principally to the use of members of Parliament. The briefs were delivered yesterday afternoon to the counsel acting for the Times, who will be the Attorney-General (Sir Richard Webster, Q.C., M.P.), Sir Henry James, Q.C., M.P., Mr. Murphy, Q.C., and Mr. W. Graham, of the English Bar, and Mr. John Atkinson, Q.C., and Mr. Ronan, of the Irish Bar. Several long consultations have been held at the Attorney-General's Chambers during the week in this case. A consultation will take place this afternoon in Sir Charles Russell's Chambers, when the counsel who will appear for Mr. Parnell and his party will be finally determined on. Up to the present Sir Charles Russell and Mr. Asquith, M.P., will appear on behalf of Mr. Parnell, while the other members of the party will be represented by Mr. R. T. Reid, Q.C., M.P., Mr. Lockwood, Q.C., M.P., Mr. Lionel Hart, Mr. Arthur Russell, and others.

LETTER FROM A YOUNG LADY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

Dear Sir—This afternoon a young lady friend and myself, now on a visit to London, took a long promenade through some of your best streets. We wanted to see the shops. As we are staying at an hotel in Piccadilly we went by way of Bond-street, Regent-street, and then as far as Temple Bar. We had no difficulty whatever until we reached Charing-cross. All along the police were very polite. They stopped the traffic, and we crossed the roads without fear; but after we had walked a little distance from Charing-cross we became almost afraid to go any further. Along both sides of the Strand there were so many cabs that we dared not cross, and there were no policemen about to help us. My friend and I both think that the policemen should prevent so many cabs being together—I mean empty cabs. Don't you think they could keep them more apart? Once my companion did try, but I was prevented going with her by a lot of men carrying boards. Then there were so many people and boys shouting out as loudly as they could that we were glad to return. Why can't the police assist ladies in the Strand the same as they do in Piccadilly?—Yours truly,

A YOUNG LADY VISITOR.

Piccadilly, Friday Evening.

Probate of the will, dated May 23 last, with codicils of Aug. 8 and Aug. 15, of the late Miss Anne Lowther, of Moresby House, Whitehaven, and 34, Albemarle-street, has been granted to the executors, the Hon. Gerard James Noel, of 31, Bruton-street, and Mr. James William Lowther, M.P., of 3, Temple-gardens, to each of whom the testatrix bequeaths £500 as executor, and a further legacy of £500 to each; and to Mr. Edmund Forrest £2,000; to his daughter Augusta, £3,000; in trust for his daughter Blanche, £3,000; and for his other three daughters each £1,500; to Annie de Vismes, £2,000; Caroline Dankwerts, £2,000; Arthur Forrest, £1,300; Augustus Forrest, £1,000; his sons Henry and Stewart, £500 each; his daughter Augusta, £1,500; to Henry Cecil Noel, Frederick Cavendish Bentinck, Harold Lowther, and Mary Lowther, each £500; to the daughters of the late Colonel Lowther Forrest, each £500; to Mr. Alleyne Robinson, of Cockermouth, £500; to Mr. Peter Shepherd, of Whitehaven, £500; to her doctor, Manley Sims, £200; to Lady Caroline Letter Kay, £200; to her maid, £400, and £250 for her great kindness and extreme attention in the testatrix's illness; to her cook £200, and to the Home for Lost Dogs at Battersea, the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and the Metropolitan Drinking Fountains Association, £200 each; to the Whitehaven Infirmary, £1,000; and for increasing the efficiency of the crew of the lifeboat at Whitehaven, £1,000. Her watercolour drawings and scenes in Westmoreland and Cumberland the testatrix bequeaths to the Hon. W. Lowther. Numerous specific bequests of jewellery to relatives and friends, and all her residuary estate, real and personal, she left in trust to pay the income to General Wm. Lowther, for his life, with remainder to his sons in equal shares. It was Miss Lowther's wish that her funeral should be conducted in a manner befitting her family and position, and that all the coachmen attending should have hat bands. The value of her personal estate has been declared at £54,303 9s 7d.

On Monday evening the Conservative Central Council for Dulwich will meet, by invitation of Mr. J. Blundell Maple, M.P., at the Crystal Palace Hotel, Upper Norwood, to consider the representation of the division on the London County Council.

The Church of England Central Society for Providing Homes for Waifs and Strays has received a legacy of £200 from the executors of the late Miss Louisa M'Kellar, of Argyll Lodge, Clapham Park, London.

SHORTHAND.—27, Chancery-lane.—(PITMAN'S.) METROPOLITAN SCHOOL (Ld.). Established 1870. E. S. Gunn, Principal; B. De Bear, Chief of the Reporting Department (now appointed for superior ability in shorthand to also lead the elementary tuition in place of late head master of that section). Pupils may join for a week only if desired. At present there is not a School of Shorthand in London that has more than one male or one female instructor to teach all its pupils.

EXCEPT the METROPOLITAN, which has 20 instruction rooms and 20 teachers and readers (men). The effect of this is, that it is the only establishment where adequate private or individual tuition and practical training are obtainable for every pupil and separate practice to writers of all speeds concurrently. Prospectus post free.—27, Chancery-lane.

AVOID INFERIOR IMITATIONS.—Beware of new schools, and those with low fees (excessively high for the return made to their pupils), which are a confession and an apology for their want of facilities and experience in producing efficient writers. (Beginners do not often know what facilities a shorthand school should possess.) But sooner or later their students discover this, and are at the additional expense of completing with us. Anything short of practical efficiency is worthless, and means time and money wasted. This school largely owes its premier position to the fact that it devotes all the energies of its large staff to the one subject, Shorthand. (Prospectus post free.—27, Chancery-lane.)

THEREFORE the METROPOLITAN SCHOOL'S RESULTS are the HIGHEST KNOWN. Soc. of Arts and Pitman's certificates. Its total exceeds that of all other schools in England combined. One thousand certificates recently obtained. Public reporting gold medal competition, all medals awarded. Prospectus post free.—27, Chancery-lane.

OLDEST and LARGEST SCHOOL (highest exam. results) in the world. Most rapid and thorough tuition. Students men taught any time they can call. Private tuition. No class teaching. Open ten to ten. Separate school for boys. Prospectus post free.—27, Chancery-lane.

REPORTS of MEETINGS, LAW CASES, &c., by B. De Bear and experienced reporters. Shorthand writers and Type-writers sent out on short notice to hotels, offices, &c. Free agency for clerks and employers. Inspect our list of vacancies, and obtain superior appointments.—27, Chancery-lane.

LADIES.—A large SHORTHAND SCHOOL, with separate teaching staff. Appointments.—Ladies proficient in shorthand, and young men can be immediately placed, employers preferring our practically trained pupils. The City Press says: "This school is the powerful factor for supplying shorthand assistants." Prospectus post free.—27, Chancery-lane.

BEST GIFT for a BOY: This SCHOOL'S COURSE of LESSONS. Proficiency guaranteed. Boarders received. Twelve-ay boys knowing shorthand do best at all exams. To enable youths from school and gentlemen without business experience to have commercial appointments, there is a separate school for TYPE-WRITING and BOOKKEEPING (KNOWLEDGE of BUSINESS and how to rapidly acquire it under a Chartered Accountant), Writing, Commercial Correspondence, Office Routine, Business and Banking, &c., taught practically.—Individual TUITION until completed to pupil's satisfaction for a fixed fee. Last term of a boy's school life should be spent here for business appointments. Highest exam. results.—Business Training College. Prospectus post free.—27, Chancery-lane.

SHORTHAND (PITMAN'S), Bookkeeping, Type-writing, and all other mercantile accomplishments thoroughly TAUGHT by certificated teachers of highest standing. Terms moderate and inclusive. The most accessible academy in London.—City School of Commerce, 38, Finsbury-pavement, E.C.

SHORTHAND (PITMAN'S). Lowest fees.—TAYLOR'S SCHOOL of Pitman's Shorthand, Type-writing, and Bookkeeping. Six years Head Master of Metropolitan School. Proficiency guaranteed for fixed fee.—40, Chancery-lane.

BOOKKEEPING, WRITING.—SMITH and SMART, 13, Wormwood-street, Bishopsgate-street, City, and 7, New Oxford-street, guarantee proficiency in a few easy, private lessons. Arithmetic and shorthand. Lessons by post. Est. 1840.

WRITING, BOOKKEEPING.—Mr. HOUSTON (from Smith and Smart) guarantees proficiency in a short course of private LESSONS. Terms moderate. Arithmetic and shorthand. Lessons by post.—Call or write, 75, Chancery-lane.

DANCING ACADEMY, 142, Old-street, City-road. PRIVATE LESSONS, with lady assistants, at any hour, 5s. each; four, 15s. 6d.; nine, 21s. Valse taught in one lesson. Elementary and advanced classes Tuesdays and Fridays. Quarter, 10s. Special valse class Mondays.—Prospectus J. Anderson.

DANCING.—Mr. BLAND and DAUGHTERS beg to announce they give LESSONS in the new valse and all the fashionable dances. Four private lessons, one guinea. Assemblies Tuesdays and Fridays. Classes. The Ball Room Companion, 13 stamps.—77, New Oxford-street, W.C. (late of Golden-square).

DANCING.—Miss WOODHAM gives private instruction in all modern Ball Room Dances at 26, Baker-street, W. Perfect Waltzing in a few lessons. Classes. Schools attended. Pianists for private parties provided.

DANCING.—Mr. and Mrs. FIELD'S select CLASSES, SATURDAYS, Mondays, Wednesdays, Thursdays. Quarter, class, or private lessons. Hall to be Let. Beautiful floor. Schools, families attended.—34, Thornhill-square, Islington.

MONEY LENT ON NOTE OF HAND Privately by CHARLES H. WHEATLEY, Esq., From £10 to £5,000, 34, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, And 27, Bloomsbury-street, New Oxford-street, London. ADVANCES MADE WITHOUT SURETIES or DELAY. In town or country, upon note of hand alone, and to assist persons into business; upon mortgage of furniture, plant and stock, without removal; also upon life policies and deeds, at 5 per cent. Strict secrecy observed.
N.B.—No genuine application ever refused. All communications strictly private. Prospectus, giving every information showing all the advantages offered, post free. Having a large surplus capital at command, all advances are granted cheaper than any other establishment in London, from one to 15 years.
N.B.—If desired Mr. Wheatley will attend personally at applicant's residence with cash, and carry out the advance.

MONEY LENT (PRIVATELY) at a FEW HOURS' NOTICE on NOTE of HAND ALONE. In sums of £10 to £2,000, at 5 per cent., to male or female, in town or country. Distance no object, as repayments can be made by P.O.O. or cheque. Advances also made upon furniture, trade and farm stock, &c., without removal, and to assist persons into business; also upon deeds, reversions, life policies, &c., from one to 10 years. No sureties required. Call personally or write to Mr. J. T. NICHOLLS (late Mr. A. H. Davis), Savoy House, 115 and 116, Strand, London, W.C. (Private entrance in Savoy-street.)
N.B.—Not an agent, or connected with loan offices, each advance being carried out quite privately and in strict confidence.

MONEY.—Applicants in Town or Country.—Do not be allured by the advertisement of so-called banks or private lenders, offering to make advances on ridiculous terms; the majority of them emanate from agents, whose object is to obtain fees, commission, and deposits. Being the actual lender, no such requirements are exacted, and the cash advanced direct at a fair rate of interest, according to risk, without the expense often attending a loan. ADVANCES are made from £20 to £5,000 upon every class of security. Existing loans are paid off. No charge made unless the money is advanced. Write or call, the latter preferred. Bills discounted. Over 20,000 advances have been made without charging a single inquiry fee.—Mr. G. COOKE, Manager, 183, Wardour-street, Oxford-street, W.

MONEY.—The REAL and PERSONAL ADVANCE COMPANY (Limited), established 1856, make immediate ADVANCES upon any approved security, repayable by instalments or otherwise, at moderate interest. Bills discounted.—G. J. SHIPWAY, Secretary, 2, Tavistock-street, Covent-garden, W.C.

MONEY.—ADVANCES made in strict confidence promptly in sums of £5 and upwards, without the usual publicity and annoyance of bills of sale or loan office routine.—Mr. TALBOT, 66, Finsbury-pavement, E.C. No preliminary fees.

MONEY LENT WITHOUT BILL OF SALE.—A private gentleman is desirous of making ADVANCES upon promissory note alone at 5 per cent. interest, to male or female, without sureties and strictly private, for any term not exceeding 10 years.—Apply for prospectus to G. H. SHOVE, Esq., 21, John-street, Adelphi, London, W.C.

MONEY.—Persons requiring prompt financial assistance are invited to put themselves in communication with Mr. CLIBURN, 41, Great Tower-street, E.C. No delay. No loan office fees. No deductions from amount agreed upon.

MONEY ADVANCED daily, in sums of £10 and upwards, without fees, on personal security.—E. STOCKDALE, 103, Cheapside, E.C.

ADVANCES, from £10 and upwards, immediately made to clerks in London employ, confidentially. No inquiries or introduction. No fee, references, nor charge.—Personally to Messrs. RICHARDS, 110, Cannon-street, E.C. Founded 1850.

LOANS.—Respectable householders and others can obtain large or small sums without delay, fees, sureties, or publicity, on very favourable terms.—Apply to principal, Mr. HOBBY, 9, Finsbury-pavement. No bona-fide application refused.

PERSONS entitled to MONEY under wills, marriage settlements, life interests, &c., can obtain ADVANCES up to £20,000, at 4 per cent. per annum. No fees whatever.—Messrs. BROWNE and CO., 22, Buckingham-street, Charing-cross.

IF YOU WANT MONEY without delay, on notes of hand or other approved securities, with strictest secrecy and no registrations, apply to Manager, 41, Great Tower-street, E.C.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.—Ladies or gentlemen entitled to money on the death of a person now living, or enjoying an income or legacy under a will or settlement, requiring to sell or borrow upon their interest, should at once apply to C. WARREN, Secretary to the City Reversionary Company, 148, Aldersgate-street, London, E.C. P.S.—All applications are treated as strictly confidential.

IMPORTANT to BORROWERS.—A financial syndicate is prepared to make immediate ADVANCES, for short or long periods, at low rates of interest upon personal security, deeds, life policies, reversions, annuities, furniture, stock, crops, plant, machinery, leasehold and freehold property; also upon diamonds, silver plate, or other valid securities, without removal or publicity, in sums from £10 to £2,000. Call personally, or send for free prospectus. Special terms offered to farmers in England and Wales on growing crops without registration.—Apply to R. G. EWINS, Bedford-row-chambers, 42, Theobald's-road, London, W.C.

SETTLEMENTS, Wills, Chancery Funds, &c.—Persons entitled under above, even if restrained from borrowing, can obtain large or small ADVANCES at low interest. Temporary advances.—BLAKE and CO., 76, Chancery-lane, W.C.

FURNISH on the EASY PAYMENT SYSTEM.—The LONDON and PROVINCIAL FURNISHING COMPANY, 251, Tottenham-court-road, W., are the largest provincial house furnishers in the kingdom. This firm furnish thousands of houses annually in all parts of the country with the utmost success, and their terms are the most liberal and most accommodating, and give the highest satisfaction to their numerous customers. Hundreds of unsolicited testimonials received. The goods are selected on their own spacious premises, thus avoiding the necessity of running all over London on the pretence of dealing with wholesale firms, this pretence being in most cases a delusion and a snare. Prospectus and price lists free. General terms:
For £5 worth 2s. weekly | For £50 worth 10s. weekly.
£10 " 3s. " | £100 " 15s. " and so on.
£20 " 4s. "
Deposit optional.
Or by special arrangements to suit the convenience of the public. Parties residing at a distance, and wishing to avoid a journey to town, may, by sending a list of their requirements, have the goods selected for them with as much care as if the goods were selected by themselves. Houses Furnished throughout in town or country, or any single article supplied, on this system. No extra charges.

GENUINE RELIABLE BARGAINS.—DISSOLUTION and WINDING-UP of the SHEFFIELD MANUFACTURING SILVERSMITHS' ASSOCIATION (Scarborough, &c.), A. ROBERTS, Esq., Trustee.—To DISPOSE OF the remainder of the Association's enormous stock of SILVER and ELECTRO-SILVER PLATE, Cutlery, &c., the trustee offers the same to the public at half price. The association was formed to supply high-class, reliable goods direct to the public at first cost. The association's name is a sufficient guarantee of quality, as none but the very best goods have been kept; but the trustee will give any reasonable warranty or reference; there being no doubt that, if seen, the goods will give every satisfaction. Any lot, or part of lot, however small, will be sent for inspection, securely packed, carriage paid, on approval, to be returned if not satisfactory at half the original low prices quoted below (the solid silver excepted), which is reduced 20 per cent. only. The depressed state of the wholesale market induces the trustee to believe he will on the whole realise far more by disposing of the goods in this way than by compulsory sale by auction, and the public have an exceptional opportunity to obtain thoroughly reliable goods at bargains, the original prices being low compared with ordinary shop prices. Full descriptive list of stock free on application.

DEBENHAM, TEWSON, FARMER, and BRIDGEWATER will SELL, at the MART, on TUESDAY, Nov. 6, at two, in one lot, with possession, the CHAULDEN HOUSE ESTATE, in the parishes of Hemel Hempstead and Bovingdon (part freehold and part copyhold, the copyhold being practically equal to freehold), comprising in all about 75 acres, with commodious family residence, having a southern aspect, commanding extensive views, and containing 10 large bed rooms, two good dressing rooms, ample [illegible] and bath rooms, lavatories, &c., dining and drawing rooms, each about 30ft. (including bow window) by 20ft., library about 20ft. square, large well-fitted kitchen, offices, and spacious cellarage. Adjoining the residence is a very handsome lofty conservatory, about 40ft. square, with arched and domed roof. Stabling for four horses, carriage house, harness room, and store [illegible], with two rooms over. There are attractive lawns and pleasure grounds, dotted with fine specimen conifers, ornamental [illegible] and shrubberies, a large kitchen garden, a great orchard, vinery, peach house, and fernery (all heated by hot water), tool-house, potting shed, and other conveniences; an excellent set of [illegible] farm buildings, bailiff's house, and two superior cottages. The park-like pasture and arable lands are in large enclosures, and a wide stream of water (part of the River Bulbourne), in which there is trout and other fishing, flows through the property for nearly half a mile. This stream has a series of waterfalls, and on its margin is a boat-house. There is also a pump-house with water-wheel, affording an abundant supply of excellent spring water to the residence, and forming a valuable motor for farming and other purposes. Subsoil chalk.—Particulars of Herbert H. Bell, Esq., Solicitor, 17 and 18, Clement's Inn, Strand, and of the Auctioneers, 80, Cheapside.

To Land Speculators, Capitalists, Land Companies, and others seeking a profitable investment in land.—Kent (26 miles from London).

MESSRS. BEAL, SON, and CHARTRES are instructed to offer for SALE by AUCTION, at the MART, E.C., on WEDNESDAY, Nov. 14, 1888, at two o'clock precisely (unless previously disposed of by private contract), in one or more lots, the important and valuable FREEHOLD MANORIAL ESTATE, known as Hartley Manor, situate within one mile of Fawkham Station on the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway. The estate comprises in all nearly 600 acres of excellent land, in good condition. There are two residences of moderate size, one known as Hartley Manor, and the other as Hartley Court. There are 50 acres of brick clay adjoining the celebrated Fawkham Brick Yards, close to the railway siding known as Longfield. On other parts of the estate are to be found valuable pottery clay, as well as layers of flint stones. The whole of these various soils rest on a subsoil of chalk, from which the chalk lime is made. Most of the land is at present in the owner's occupation. Capital shooting can be had in the woods on the estate. The whole forms a very enjoyable residential estate, coupled with the great advantages it offers to an enterprising man to develop its undoubted valuable resources. If not sold as a whole it will be offered in six lots, as follows: House and 100 acres, cottage and 12 acres, small farm 73 acres, cottages and 30 acres, brick-earth land 12 acres, and residence and 392 acres.—Particulars and plans may be had of Messrs. Farrar and Co., 66, Lincoln's Inn-fields, and, with cards to view, of the Auctioneers, at their Offices, 20, Regent-street, London, and Eastbourne.
